ANOTHER SCHOOL PRIZE DAY

AT GOVERNMENT VERNACULAR
MIDDLE SCHOOL

REVIEW OF THE YEAR

This forenoon, the annual distribution of prizes took place at the Government Vernacular Middle School in the presence of a large number of parents and friends. The Hon. Dr. S. W. Ts'o gave a short address.

Head Master's Address

Mr. K. H. Li, the head master, addressed the gathering as follows:— Before reviewing the school work of last year, I am glad to have this opportunity of congratulating Dr. S. W. Ts'o on his appointment to the Legislative Council. Though his worthy appointment took place in last January, I consider this a most appropriate function at which to offer him our hearty congratulations in the presence of our supporters and friends as well as guardians and students. Dr. Ts'o was one of the most ardent promoters of this school when the scheme for founding this institution was first mooted. Since its establishment in 1926, Dr. Ts'o has been a "Hok Tung" of our school, and in this capacity he has shown untiring interest in our work and progress. Therefore this morning we have the greatest pleasure in welcoming him to preside at our prize-giving.

Staff

Last year we were fortunate in having no change in the teaching staff. On the other hand, our Anglo-Chinese staff was strengthened by the addition of Mr. Tse Chan-yau, an Education graduate of the Hong Kong University.

The maximum enrolment of the year was 191 and average attendance 176.45 as against 208 and 186.31 respectively in 1928.

881 Candidates Refused
Our entrance examination held on January 3, (1929) was attended by 269 candidates, of whom 49 were admitted. It is noteworthy that within four years, since its establishment in 1926, this school has been obliged, on account of lack of accommodation, to refuse admission to 881 candidates.

During the year the school was inspected twice by the Director of Education. On his first inspection he was accompanied by Mr. Yu Wan, and on this occasion we were also honoured by the presence of Mr. P. T. Allen, the Secretary for Chinese Affairs in the Straits Settlements.

For medical inspection, Dr. Minett, the Medical Officer for Schools, visited us in June and November. We are always glad to have her valuable advice.

Six Scholarships

Our school has been particularly fortunate in obtaining the generous support of our friends and well-wishers. At the beginning of the year Mr. Fung Ping-shan presented to our Library 159 volumes of Chinese books, and in December gave this school a donation of $3,000, for the purpose of establishing six scholarships of $40 each out of the annual interest upon the donation. Two of these scholarships are to be awarded every year to the best two new entrants who gain the highest total marks in the entrance examination for the Middle School Division. The other four are to be given to candidates qualified for the same Division, but financially unable to enter without the assistance of a scholarship. In fact, it was very kind of Mr. Fung to ask me how many scholarships I wanted, and he was prepared to give as many as necessary, but owing to the small number of candidates qualified for the Middle School Division every year, I was satisfied with six for the time being. I am sure all present here this morning will endorse my expression of cordial thanks for his generosity.

Gift of 140 Volumes

We are also grateful to the Pan Hok-tun, a body of gentlemen now represented by Mr. T. N. Chau and Mr. Kwok Yau-ting, for the presentation of 140 volumes of Chinese books and for the continuation of their Middle School and Normal Scholarships, which have been very encouraging and helpful to students who have benefited by these kind gifts.

No less gratitude is due to Mr. Kwok Fung-tung of Shanghai, who in February presented us through the parcel post with another 120 volumes of Chinese books. As you already know, in 1928, the major part of our Chinese Library was

NEW THREAT TO WUCHOW

IRONSIDES JOIN UP WITH KWANGSI REBELS

GOVERNMENT'S PLAN

Another chapter in the intermittent war between Kwangtung and Kwangsi appears to have been entered upon for a wireless report from a well-informed source in Wuchow, the port of Kwangsi, reads:—

"It is stated that General Chang Pah-kuei has rallied the remnants of his troops (the Ironsides, who were driven out of Kwangtung) and that a junction with his co-rebels, the Kwangsi-ies, has been effected. The combined action is believed to be threatening Wuchow (which the Cantonese loyalists hold).

"Communication between Wuchow and Nanking (further up the West River) has been severed but the situation in Wuchow remains quiet."

The China Mail learns that the military authorities have requisitioned a large number of small native craft for use on the West River, probably to effect withdrawal (with the possible evacuation of Wuchow) in order to shorten the line of communication with Canton and thereby stiffen the resistance against the rebels.

made up of presentation books from Mr. Kwok Fung-tung.

Last but not least, we are indebted to Mr. Tang Shiu-kin for sending us for examination some selected students of the Tung Wah free schools, with a view to supporting two by giving them Tung Wah Hospital Scholarships as instituted in 1928. But I regret to say that none of them was found fit for our First Year Normal Class.

Vernacular Teachers

Last November the two students in our top class sat for the Special Matriculation of the Chinese School of the University, and one was successful. Of the 12 Final Normal students examined by Government examiners in December, seven passed, and they are to be awarded teacher-certificates this morning.

It is gratifying to note that besides those chosen for teaching posts under the Government, these certificate-winners are generally engaged every year by private schools in the Colony, almost immediately after their examination results are known. Therefore the Normal Division has the important work of producing a young generation of vernacular teachers for the colony. The name of our school might be somewhat misleading to the general public. So I feel I should take this opportunity to explain some of the work of our Middle School Division. Besides aiming at a high standard in Confucian Classics, Chinese Literature and Chinese History, this Division is taught English, European History, Geography, and Mathematics up to the Junior Local standard, while Physics, Chemistry and Economics are not neglected in our curriculum. With a fair grounding in modern subjects, students of this Division are helped to understand their Chinese studies more intelligently from the modern point of view. The object is to preserve the best of our Chinese learning, and at the same time not to neglect modern studies through the British medium. Consequently the work of this school is well worth the labour and devotion of the whole staff.

Chinese painting is taught to six of our classes. Our young painters sent a collection of their school exercises to the Inter-School Art Exhibition held by the Commercial Press in May, and several of their exhibits met with public appreciation. For this success I must congratulate Mr. Wong Pun-yau, the Art Master.

Sphere of Sport

In the sphere of sport the students did their level best this year. Again our Senior Volley Ball Team was sent to compete for the Championship of the Hong Kong School League, and again they retained the honour with King's College. Being stimulated by the success of their seniors last year, the younger boys also asked to participate in League matches. As a sort of experiment, we entered a Small Boys' team in the Hong Kong School Volley Ball League. And in spite of the lack of space and time for training, our youngsters also turned out runners-up. Such results are gratifying when we take into consideration our little triangular ground for practice. In football we had nine

LADY LAMPSON

Laid to Rest at Happy Valley

BISHOP CONDUCTS SERVICE

Floral tributes in profusion, some of great beauty, marked the spot in the Cemetery at Happy Valley where a distinguished visitor in the person of Lady Lampson, wife of Sir Miles Lampson (British Minister to China) was buried yesterday. The funeral ceremony was entirely of a private character, such having been the wish expressed by the bereaved husband.

The Bishop of Victoria (Rt. Rev. C. R. Duppuy, D.D.) conducted the graveside service, assisted by the Dean of St. John's (Very Rev. A. Swann, D.S.O.).

Among the mourners were noticed Sir Miles Lampson with Mr. J. C. Sterndale Bennett, C.M.G., M.C., H.E. the Governor of Hong Kong (Sir C. Clementi, K.C.M.G.), H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, China Station (Vice-Admiral Sir A. K. Walsell, K.C.M.G.), H.E. the General Officer Commanding the British Troops in China (Major-General J. W. Sandilands, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O.), Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G. (Colonial Secretary), Mr. G. S. Moss (British Consul-General, Canton), Lt.-Col. F. Hayley Bell, D.S.O. (representing the Inspector-General, Chinese Maritime Customs), members of the Executive and Legislative Councils of Hong Kong, etc.

Wreaths were sent by the Committee and members of the British Chamber of Commerce and China Committee, Shanghai; Mr. and Mrs. R. Calder-Marshall, Shanghai; the Committee and members, Hong Kong General Chamber of Commerce; China Association, and the Girl Guides' Association of Hong Kong. In connection with the latter tribute the China Mail learns that Lady Lampson was keenly interested in the Girl Guides' movement and intended, whilst in the Colony, to suggest the appointment of a corresponding secretary to link up Hong Kong and Peking and vice versa. It may be a thoughtful act of courtesy on the part of the local Girl Guides' Association to give effect at an early date to Lady Lampson's wish in this respect.

MINISTERIAL CHANGES

Rugby, Yesterday.
Sir Robert Vansittart, Permanent Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, has appointed Mr. Clifford Norton to be his Private Secretary in place of Mr. G. N. M. Bland, who has been appointed Counsellor of His Majesty's Embassy in Brussels.—British Wireless Service.

AIRCRAFT MOORING

In the absence of any special arrangement, the charge for using the Commercial Section of the Hong Kong Government Aerodrome at Kowloon Bay, including any buoy-belonging thereto, will be $1 for each period of the aircraft's visit to the Colony.

SENTENCE ON HATRY

END OF A SENSATIONAL TRIAL

LONG TERMS GIVEN

London, Yesterday.
Hatry has been sentenced to 14 years' penal servitude; Daniels seven years; Dixon five years; and Tabor three years.

The sentences in each case will include two years' hard labour, running concurrently with the main sentence.

Judge's Scathing Comment

Rugby, Yesterday.
The trial concluded to-day of Clarence Hatry and his three co-defendants, Daniels, Dixon and Tabor, on charges of extensive for-

EXTRALITY TEST CASE

Naval Officer Placed Under Arrest

Hankow, Yesterday.
The first extrality test case was held here to-day when Paymaster Commander McBride, of the Naval Office, last night whilst driving a car, ran over a Chinese boy, aged 16, riding a cycle, and killed him. Comdr. McBride was arrested by the Chinese police and taken to the City. Later he was released by the Mayor, Mr. Liu, after consular representations had been made.—Reuter.

geries and frauds involving large sums of money. The main counts against the defendants, who were all directors of what was known as the Hatry group of companies, were that they conspired together to forge certificates of stock of the Corporations of Swinton, Gloucester and Wakefield, on which they raised $789,000, and that they fraudulently withheld or appropriated a further sum of $822,000 which they received for the genuine stock of those corporations.

The case came to a dramatic termination to-day, when all the defendants withdrew their pleas of not guilty and pleaded guilty.

Mr. Justice Jowett passed a sentence of penal servitude of 14 years on Hatry, seven years on Daniels, five years on Dixon, and three years on Tabor. Various sentences on other counts were imposed, but they run concurrently. The effect of them is that during the first two years of his main sentence each prisoner will undergo hard labour. The Judge described the frauds as the most appalling that have ever disgraced the commercial reputation of

INDIAN AFFAIRS

End of Disobedience Campaign

FARMERS RELEASED

Bombay, Yesterday.
The dispute in Kakharechi has been settled. The participants in the civil disobedience campaign have withdrawn and the farmers, who have been released, declare themselves satisfied.—Reuter.

[A Bombay cable of January 19 stated—Gandhi has bestowed his blessing on the passive resistance campaign at Kakharechi village in Malia State, Kathiawar, where the farmers for some time past have been stubbornly resisting the system of "forced labour" and have been refusing to pay certain taxes. Several conflicts between the farmers and the police have already occurred, and recently eighteen farmers were placed under arrest in connection with the trouble. Gandhi has now consented to despatch a large force of "passive resistance volunteers" of both sexes with the idea of assisting the farmers in their campaign.]

this country.—British Wireless Service.

Earlier Cables

London, Yesterday.
When the trial of Hatry and his associates was resumed this morning at the Old Bailey, before Mr. Justice Avory, all four defendants withdrew their pleas of not guilty and pleaded "guilty" to the indictment of forging and uttering certificates in respect of Swinton, Gloucester and Wakefield Corporation stock.

The Attorney-General (Sir William Jowett, K.C., M.P.) for the Crown stated that the defendants raised $789,000 by bogus certificates relating to the stock of these corporations. Furthermore they failed to pay $822,000 to the said corporations for genuine stock.

The jury, on the Judge's direction, returned a formal verdict of "guilty" against each accused.

Arguments in respect of the other indictments are proceeding.

Certain Charges Dismissed
Subsequently Tabor was formally found not guilty of charges in respect of dealings in shares of the Drapery Trust, the Associated Automatic Machine Corporation, the Austin Friars Trust and the Corporation and General Securities Dundee Trust.

Hatry's "Nobility"

The crowded Court listened in tense silence to an emotional speech by Mr. Norman Birkett, K.C., on behalf of Hatry, whose action, according to counsel, showed a "shining desire to protect other people."

When Galdini (as Indian Director of the Trust, who is safe in Italy) first suggested fraudulent duplication of stock, Mr. Hatry threatened to blow out his brains on the spot, if the decision was not taken immediately to transfer the shares. Counsel asserted that the other defendants protested, but Hatry assured them that he was undertaking negotiations which would enable the duplicate stock to be immediately redeemed. "Those negotiations were actually successful before they were too late."—Reuter.

NAVAL EXPERTS ALL OPTIMISTIC

DELEGATES SATISFIED WITH PROGRESS MADE

PREMIER BUSY

Rugby, Yesterday.
The delegates to the Naval Conference express satisfaction with the progress so far made in getting the machinery of the conference in working order. The Prime Minister and the heads of the other delegations are following the plan of getting their problems brought under active consideration by the interested parties. For this purpose to-day there were several informal meetings.

This morning the full delegations of France and the United Kingdom met at 10, Downing Street to consider the report which the committee of experts had been asked to prepare. A communique stated that this report shows encouraging results on certain points and it was decided to invite the experts to continue their conversations. After the member of the French delegation had withdrawn, the Italian delegates were received by the Prime Minister and other members of the United Kingdom delegation, and the general business of the United Kingdom delegation, and the general business of the conference was discussed.—British Wireless Service.

Earlier News

Further informal meetings of delegates to the Naval Conference were held this morning. The French delegates attended at the Prime Minister's official residence and remained in conference with him for about an hour. The Japanese delegates were later met by the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Arthur Henderson and by the principal Dominion delegates to discuss certain aspects of the problems. Shortly before noon, the Prime Minister had a further meeting with Signor Grandi.

This afternoon, after dealing with some matters of domestic politics, the Prime Minister will leave for Chequers where he will spend the week-end.

At the conclusion of the meeting held at the Prime Minister's official residence this morning the following communique was issued:

"The French and British delegations met this morning to consider a report which a committee of experts had been asked to prepare.

"This report shows encouraging results on certain points and it was decided to invite the experts to continue their conversations."—British Wireless Service.

Press Must Attend

London, Yesterday.
Mr. Stimson addressing a gathering of pressmen referred to his disappointment at the absence of the Press from yesterday's conference.

Mr. Stimson said he saw no reason for it, except lack of space. He was going to recommend that the American delegation give up three seats to enable three American News Agencies to be represented in future and he hoped other delegations would follow suit.—Reuter.

Guildhall Banquet

Rugby, Yesterday.
The Lord Mayor of London welcomed the delegations at a reception and banquet at the Guild Hall last night.

In proposing a toast of success to the Conference the Lord Mayor referred to the great task before the delegates.

He said, "There are, of course, numerous difficulties, some obvious and some obscure, but none of them ought to be insuperable if approached in a spirit of business, commonsense, goodwill and co-operation."

"The French Premier, Monsieur Tardieu, responding on behalf of the Foreign delegations said, 'We are the servants of peace and it is our hope on the one hand to diminish, by suitable agreements, the danger of conflict, and on the other to make peace less onerous and more secured by reducing the burden which unlimited competition in naval expenditure has imposed upon the world. If we are all driving for the same goal, how shall we fail to reach agreement in regard to means?' Observing that they desired that the magnitude of the enterprise should be appreciated he nevertheless declared in the name of all—Ameri-

OLD RESIDENT'S DEATH

CAPT. ARTHUR PASSES AWAY
IN HIS SLEEP

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

We regret to have to announce the death of Capt. George Duncan Macpherson Arthur, Junior partner in the firm of Messrs. Carmichael and Clarke, marine surveyors.

Capt. Arthur had been in indifferent health. He retired for the night without showing any signs of illness, and death must have occurred whilst in his sleep. According to medical opinion death took place at about 2 a.m.

He resided on the top floor of No. 38B, Nathan Road.

Capt. Arthur, who was about 55 years of age, had been a resident in the Colony for about ten years. For several years past he was associated with Capt. T. G. H. Brayfield in the business of marine surveyors under the name of Messrs. Carmichael and Clarke.

The funeral will take place at the Protestant Cemetery to-morrow afternoon, passing the Monument at 4 o'clock. His body has in the meantime been removed to the Kowloon Mortuary.

Torpedoed Twice

In addition to his experience with pirates, Captain Arthur was twice torpedoed by German submarines when on service during the Great War. On the latter occasion, his ship, the "Trollius," had only left port 24 hours.

It is recalled, as Commander in the Blue Funnel fleet, his last ship was the "Lamedon," which is well known in Hong Kong.

In 1920 Captain Arthur joined the Union Insurance Society of Canton, Ltd., and, about two years later, became associated with Messrs. Carmichael and Clarke.

He was in command of several Blue Funnel steamers prior to his settling down in Hong Kong, and was well-known in many ports. He leaves a wife and children at home to mourn his loss, and for whom the deepest sympathy is extended.

Capt. Arthur may well be remembered for the good work done in saving the s.s. Kowah at Wangmum about two years ago. He spent several days on the job, sleeping on a lighter, and, whilst he was thus engaged, he was attacked by a party of bandits who went to the wreck to plunder the cargo.

Captain Arthur was a native of Devonshire. The widow is at Home. Of the children, the daughter is married and the son is at school.

Having been in indifferent health for some time, Captain Arthur will be mourned by a large circle of friends in Hong Kong and elsewhere.

Long Vision Needed

"My country above all others is less able to understand the great colonial role played by Great Britain in the light of our own broader colonial experience. We must have long vision. Our difficulties are rather in our habits of thought than in our habits of ourselves. We shall, however, overcome them."

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who proposed the toast of the Lord Mayor and Corporation, said that the Conference had need of "a strange combination of business idealism, of political wisdom and of capacity to understand what was essential to the foundation of national greatness."—British Wireless Service.

THE TRAFFIC LINKS OF EMPIRE

THE SUEZ CANAL AND THE CHANNEL TUNNEL

OPPOSITION

The anniversary of the opening of the Suez Canal sixty years ago has a very interesting repercussion on the problem of the Channel Tunnel to-day. Incredible as it now appears after sixty years, the construction of the Suez Canal, which has become one of the most important links of the British Empire, was bitterly opposed would use his influence with the Porte to get this approval, he replied with an emphatic negative:—

It is an undertaking which I believe in point of commercial character may be deemed to rank among the many bubble schemes that from time to time have been palmed upon gullible capitalists. I have been informed on what I believe to be reliable authority that at an expense which would be far too great to warrant any expectation of any returns.

Happily, in spite of this extraordinary attitude on the part of British officials and the Prime Minister of Great Britain, M. de Lesseps was able to go ahead and build his canal. Not long after it was built, the British Government, under the inspiration of existence, and is ready to start work on the tunnel directly it receives permission from the British Government. That permission is still withheld. In March last Mr. Baldwin, then Prime Minister, appointed a Committee to inquire into the matter.

What lines the report will be on, and what issues the Committee is considering are not known. The main issues have long been under public discussion. The great advantage of a tunnel would be that it would enable goods and passengers to be sent from Britain to the continent of Europe without the delay that is involved in changing from rail to steamer. This would beneficially affect not only our traffic with France, but also with Belgium, Holland and Germany, and probably the whole of central and also with eastern Europe. Not only would this linking up of rail services improve our continental trade, but it would also benefit our overseas trade.

At present for example, a good many Americans visiting Europe via French ports avoid including Britain in their tour because they

Here is an exclusive picture taken from the air of the she foundered on her first trip to Boston where her Stala, Edsel Ford's new $400,000 yacht, pounding to master awaited. One seaman was drowned and two pieces on the reefs off New Bedford, Mass., where others hurt in the rescue.

ed by British officials and politicians when the idea of the Canal was first suggested, writes Harold Cox in the Sunday Times. M. de Lesseps, to whom the world owes the Suez Canal, necessarily had to begin by securing the approval of the Egyptian Government; he immediately encountered the opposition of the British Government. As early as 1854 we find the British representative in Cairo writing to Downing Street expressing strong disapproval of the scheme, especially on the ground that the Canal would separate Egypt from the Turkish Empire, of which it then formed a part.

A few months later the Foreign Office writes to the British representative in Constantinople strongly pressing his political objection to the construction of the Canal, and crudely saying that M. de Lesseps must have political objects in view, for otherwise he would not be pushing a scheme that was financially hopeless. A later letter from the Foreign Office goes into more details, and enumerates numbers of objections that then seemed to obsess the minds of British officials. Among other points in this letter is the statement that "such a canal would be constantly receiving blowing sand; a constant expense would be incurred in getting out of the Canal the sand which would constantly be blown into it again." On such arguments as this the British Foreign Office came to the conclusion that the Canal could not be a profitable commercial proposition.

Palmerston's Negative On the other hand, the French Government from the outset took a favourable view of M. de Lesseps's project and pointed out in correspondence with the British Government that the canal would be beneficial to the trade of Great Britain as well as to the rest of the world. The scheme also obtained the approval of the Viceroy of Egypt, who granted a concession to Ferdinand de Lesseps to construct the canal. As Egypt was then part of the Turkish Empire it was necessary that this concession should receive the approval of the Porte, but when Lord Palmerston was asked in the House of Commons in July, 1857, whether he Disraeli, bought up the shares held by the Khedive of Egypt—probably one of the best financial, as well as political, investments the British Government has ever made.

Military Objections

Yet, just in the same way as British politicians and British officials opposed the construction of the Suez Canal, so they are now opposing the construction of the Channel Tunnel. Again and again successive governments have vetoed the project. The last veto came from Mr. Ramsay MacDonald in 1924, given on the advice of the Imperial Committee of Defence. Some of our soldiers—happily not all—seem to be obsessed with the idea that the existence of a tunnel would weaken our national defences. They honestly admit that if we had warning of war the tunnel would constitute no danger at all, because it could be so easily put out of action, but some of them argue that if the tunnel were constructed it might at any moment be used in time of profound peace when there was no suggestion of war in the atmosphere, for the purpose of invading Britain. The answer is, that though countries have often committed acts of war without a formal declaration of war, these acts have only been committed when international relations were seriously strained and the countries concerned were fully conscious of the possibility of war.

Equally important is the consideration that the particular risk that these over-anxious soldiers contemplate has ceased to be of any appreciable importance since the development of flying. If it is true that the countries will commit acts of war in time of profound peace then at any moment we may expect London to be attacked and perhaps completely destroyed by an air invasion.

London to Cape Town Leaving aside these alleged military dangers, there remains the practical question of commerce and finance. Very wisely, the advocates of a Channel Tunnel expressly refrain from asking for any financial assistance from the Government towards its construction. A Channel Tunnel Company has been for some time in dislike crossing the Channel. A Channel Tunnel would make Britain more or less a railway terminus for the trans-Atlantic trade of Europe. It might also in years to come bring Africa as well as Europe into direct railway communication with Britain. Already the idea of a tunnel under the Straits of Gibraltar is being considered, and simultaneously great railway developments are taking place throughout Africa. With the completion of these schemes and with the completion of the Channel Tunnel it will some day be possible to travel by rail from London to Cape Town.

OBITUARY

Sir Gershom
Stewart.

Many members of the seafaring community in Liverpool, particularly adherents of the Mercantile Marine Service Association, will regret to hear of the passing of Sir Gershom Stewart, who had for the past ten years held the office of honorary treasurer to that society. For very many years Sir Gershom pressed, both in and out of Parliament, the claims on behalf of British merchant seamen, and although he retired recently from Parliamentary activities, there will be many of the present generation of ship-masters and officers who will remember his work with affection and gratitude. He had exerted himself very ably on many occasions in the House of Commons on behalf of the Merchant Navy, and gave further proof of his interest in the profession by accepting the position of honorary treasurer of the association, and also of the School Ship-Conway.

Captain John Kelsey
Messrs. Elder Dempster and Co.
have received full details as to the cause of the death of Captain John Kelsey of the steamer Patani, while lying at Forcados. It appears that Captain Kelsey was on the bridge of his steamer, and had been using a revolver. It accidentally fell on the deck, and Captain Kelsey, stooping to pick it up, it exploded, the bullet entering his heart. He died almost immediately, and the inquest verdict was that his death was caused accidentally.

Captain Kelsey had been in the service of the company for 20 years, and was very highly respected and esteemed, not only out on the West Coast, to which he had been running continuously, but also by his owners and the officials, who deplore the loss of one of their most capable and loyal masters. He joined as third officer on August 19, 1909, when he was attached to the chartered steamer Moorland. He subsequently served as third officer in the Melville and Monarch, and then was promoted second mate on July 8, 1910, to the Melville. On June 22, 1913, he was appointed chief officer of the Montenegro, and served in that capacity on the Adda, Abonema, Salaga, and Elmina. In the latter ship he served as chief officer for 4 1/2 years, and was promoted master on December 24, 1925, when he took command of the Warri, and had since commanded the steamers
New Brunswick, Boutry, and Patani.

Chief Engineer J. W. Jones
How a chief engineer fell 20 feet to his death into a ship's hold a few moments after he had given his companion a warning to be careful, was related at a Liverpool inquest on John William Jones, aged 60, chief engineer of the Nelson liner Highland Enterprise, and living in Miriam-road, Anfield, Liverpool, when a verdict of accidental death was recorded.
Alfred Graham, Cambridge Road, Middlesbrough, said he was engaged inspecting the Highland Enterprise in the Canada Dock and was accompanied by Mr.
Jones. "We went down to the lower 'tween decks," said Graham.
"On reaching that deck the chief engineer lit a second taper and

RECONSTRUCTION OF BUOYS

Reconstruction of buoys in the harbour has been approved by the Government, who are the owners, and tenders are being called for.
The total number of moorings will remain at 56. Of this number, 20 are for C class (i.e., the smallest) vessels. On completion of the work, there will be fewer C's and more B's, which may be an indication that more medium-size ships are calling regularly at Hong Kong.

The number of typhoon moorings (i.e., those specially laid down so that ships can remain at them even during a gale) will remain 16, 14 of which are A's and two B's, which two will also be made into A's. Concrete blocks of 90 tons are used for the A class. The 30 ton blocks referred to in the "Gazette" are for C class.

There will also be general lifting and relaying. The announcement, calling for tenders for the conversion of commercial moorings, gives the following details:—

To supply and fixing 2 concrete block moorings.
To supply of 6 B class concrete
block moorings.
To lift and relay 14 A class moorings; to lift and relay 4 B class moorings; to lift and relay 3 C class moorings; to lift and relay 9 B class chain moorings; to lift and relay 3 C class chain moorings; to lift and transport to Dock 10 C class moorings; to supply 3 30-ton concrete blocks and 3-inch shackles, connect up etc.
The exact number required is unknown at present, but will not exceed 8.
To supply 8 A class mooring buoys.

STILL WATERS

Reference to the
A Haggis Haggis at the Story Burns Dinner last night recalls a happy "skip" that appeared in a local weekly 24 years ago, wherein it was facetiously recorded:
"Several Scotties called on me in a body, gammoned me up about my powers of organisation generally, and finally got me to write to Edinburgh for a subscription Haggis. They said this Haggis—though never so genuine a one—wouldn't eat thoroughly Haggislike unless exploded or opened (or whatever is the term for letting Haggis loose) in my rooms. The Scottish subscribers voted with enthusiasm that as Secretary to that Haggis, I was fully empowered to order the whisky and, in fact, I was given full financial powers in the matter. There's to be no stint," said the General Committee grasping my hand cordially. There wasn't either.
We let the Haggis loose in the middle of the day. I've never seen so much refreshment taken at one single session. The genial subscribers, stuck up whisky like soldiers. The proposer of the Haggis called for silence at last.
Haggis to his feet he reminded the company that they were indebted to him for the Haggis.

Bananas, for the
A Banana first time in their Cure history, are to be taken seriously. It should interest all in Hong Kong who buy bananas and along "Yes,
we have no bananas," that Mr.
Crowther, a British scientific chemist, has discovered that bananas stalks, correctly treated, are a certain cure for various kinds of skin diseases. Mr.
Crowther has made experiments with sufferers who have been cured by the banana treatment.
Treated stalks, ready for applicagetting the Haggis. He felt they could not possibly leave without thanking me for my generous little thought in asking them round, and wound up by drinking my health with musical honours.

As each guest left he pressed my hand warmly and said "Thank you, old fellow." It was said that the effect of the Haggis tiffin was to turn me a bright blue. I turned a jolly sight bluer when it dawned on me that the thanks of that Haggis Committee were in lieu of subscriptions! If I'd been a genuine Scotsman such a thing would never have happened!"

Cruelty to chickens Cruelty still persists, and Poultry, no doubt, will for ever. Practically

daily in the Police Courts, ignorant—perhaps some are!—Chinese, men and women, young and old, get fined and pay the penalty, and so this state of affairs goes on. In a British Colony, one would expect the law to be stronger—in instances of cruelty
—and the penalty heavier. Yet, when a hawk is arrested for obstruction, he or she—be it the first offence, or, if they have no licence—has the finger prints taken, and on the second offence, down pounces the paw of penalty
and the fine is nearly doubled.
Now, should this course not also apply to one who is caught carrying a chicken, or a duck, by its wings, or legs, or cruelty to pigs: in a crate without matting. Weekly about 40 to 50 Chinese are fined for obstruction at their respective shops or stalls in the street, and this fine has risen from $2 to $4 or even $5. These Chinese are a cunning lot, because they know very well that if they are arrested for cruelty to poultry, what is the result?—only a fine of $5 or $10. That fine is too common and more should be made of the alternative of—say, one week in jail. That would perhaps teach them that persistent cruelty to poultry will not be tolerated in a British Colony.

Hong Kong, Saturday, Jan. 25, 1930.

tion, are to be sent to some of London's leading hospitals. Before the banana stalks are ready for use they have to be given a strong dose of ultra-violet rays, which restores to them all the vitamins they have lost in storage. Mr. Crowther related how he came to make his discovery. As he spoke the banana stalks, reviving gradually under the influence of powerful lamps, appeared to turn from dark brown to a handsome bronze gold.

"I wanted to find a War-time certain wash for Memory some cleaning mixtures I was inventing," said Mr. Crowther, "when I suddenly thought I might obtain it from banana skins. I remembered how fond young officers were in war-time of banana skins, because they cleaned their boots and belts so well. The banana stalks were laid in a great pile in a yard. Some days later a man working for me turned them over. He worked on the pile for two or three days in succession, and at the end of that time came running to me, surprised. The eczema on one of his hands had completely disappeared, and his hands were unstained. Each week about 98,000 of these stalks are thrown away by fruit merchants as waste products. The banana stalks are strapped on the patient like plasters, and left there. When the strapping is undone nothing remains of the stalks except some dry powder. The patient is completely cured."—The next time we visit the Central Market we'll pick up all the banana stalks we find and set up in business—as a quack!

King and Naval Conference

THE fact that the King, notwithstanding his present temporary abstention from the more formal State functions, should have assented to open the Naval Conference, is characteristic of his Majesty's close and sustained interest in naval matters, even of a highly technical character.

Throughout the Naval Conference which was held at Washington in the autumn of 1921, the King did not miss a single one of the reports telegraphed to the Prime Minister and Cabinet, or to the Foreign Office and Board of Admiralty, by the British delegates and their naval advisers.
He read them, daily or twice daily, with unfailing regularity and despatch.

Dislike of Submarines

BOTH on professional grounds, as a naval officer of wide experience, and on humane grounds, because of the terrible loss of life involved by the sinking of a hopelessly outdated, with its numerous crew, at the height of a modern sea-fight, his Majesty welcomed the decision of that Conference to limit the size and therefore the complement of capital ships.

What is perhaps more widely known is King George's dislike, which he shares with most British sailors, of the submarine, also on grounds of humanity and civility.

MANKIND TO CONTROL DESTINY

"DEATH IS NOT NECESSARY"

(By Professor F. A. E. Crew)

THERE are no mysteries of life and death—only ignorance. It is of the utmost importance that we should free ourselves once and for all of the notion that death is a necessary attribute or an inevitable consequence of life.

It has been abundantly demonstrated that life can, and does, continue without ceasing. Given appropriate and necessary conditions of environment, eternal youth is in fact a reality for a number of forms.

It is possible to take a fat worm, and, by repeated processes of starvation, keep it alive twenty times longer than it would have lived in the ordinary way.

Similar treatment in the case of a man might bring about similar rejuvenation, but I doubt it.
Starvation has a different effect upon the human mechanism and is apt to throw it out of gear. It is a fact that the process of individuals in appropriate circumstances to develop respiratory and circulatory diseases is ingrained in the constitution.

This harmony in both systems accounts for the majority of natural deaths. These are the laggards evolution—the rest are still able to fulfill their functions without deterioration.

Are we to wait the evolution of a type with efficient heart and lungs; are we to set about the tasks of breeding such a type, or are we to seek and gain the knowledge of repairing the deficiencies of the inherited endowments of individuals by means of a personal and social engineering?

Thyroid extract and ultra-violet rays are but the forerunners of the vast powers which mankind

Because it is embodied in effect,

The China New Year vacation at the Supreme Court lasts from inclusive, when the offices will be open from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. except on public holidays. This does not apply to the Criminal Sessions.

At the annual meeting of the St.

ultimately will control. At the present time individuals cease to live when the initial store of energy which they inherited is dissipated.

Lost Energy
As yet this lost energy cannot be restored. The reason for this is that we know nothing of the nature of the energy and nothing of the means of reinforcing it.

The water-borne animal may continue to grow indefinitely, but swiftly-moving land animals must maintain a definite relation between body and the cross sectional areas of their bones and muscles.

Before puberty man shows addition in weight in equal intervals of time in geometrical progression, but after puberty additions in weight occur in arithmetical progression. In fish the annual increment remains positive; in man the difference in weight actually becomes negative, and after the twenty-eighth year or so there is a constant net loss of weight of protein amounting annually to about 8 per cent. of the weight at 28.

Living For Ever
We grow up and then we grow down. If we can subtract the inevitable yearly loss, it would be possible to see when a man would die.

At the moment a man can slightly prolong his life or slightly reduce it.
He cannot profoundly affect the time at which he is doomed to die. He has cause to know the causes of ageing, the cause of the loss of the proteins and gets to know the methods by which that loss may be replaced. Thus he may prolong his life indefinitely.

As knowledge increases, as increase it must, so also will man's power over his physical environment and over the mechanism that is himself. Science, as well as religion, affirms that in the future mankind may, if it be so desired, not only remain permanently youthful, but also may live for ever.

The opinion of the scientist is no more extravagant than the creed of the theologian. The scientist will give to mankind the power to control the mechanism that drives him to his destiny. Mankind will be able to choose for himself what that destiny shall be. What shall it be.
That is the question that we must answer.

Ten Years Ago

[From the "China Mail,"

Rents—If the Government were really in earnest and not afraid of the "Gang," it could do good work with a stroke of the pen, in the shape of a Rent Restriction Bill.
No matter what may have been said to the contrary, there is profligence in rents going on, and Chinese owners are not the only offenders.

with the conduct of Sir William Edge, the member for Boworth, in the division on the Coal Bill.

As Deputy Chief Whip, it was to be expected that Sir William would exert himself to get every one of his men into the lobby against the second reading. In fact, despite this leader's devastating attack on the measure, he himself lined up with the Socialists
in support of it.

There is a large mining element in Boworth, but one is reluctant to believe that such a consideration influenced Sir William's action.

The latitude which is claimed by the ordinary Liberal M.P. is hardly exercised by one holding the responsible office of Whip, and Liberals are finding it difficult to see how one who has himself fallen so signally short of the requirements of party discipline can continue in a position in which he is required to impose it on others.

A Literary Exodus

MOST of the British well-known literary people appear to have gone, or to be going, abroad.
Mr. H. G. Wells has gone to Grassano, and Mr. Galsworthy to Majorca; Mr. Bernard Shaw seeks the warmth of another island;
how, indeed, these people are—and Miss Rebecca West will soon be leaving for the south of France.

The last named sits up all night to finish articles for the "Times," and one can only hope that she and her secretary will contrive a shorter working week where they are going.

A Strange Bridge Incident

TO all who are tired of long treatises on the intricacies of bridge and even of non-players, a would recommend a book which I have been reading over the last week and a half.
It is called "Reflections of a Bridge Player," by Lieut.-Colonel Walter R. R. R.

In the chapter on strange occurrences, the author tells how he lost eight rubbers running, won the ninth,
and got up a winner.

Another incident concerns two expert players and two mediocre players.
The two experts "cut" together, whereupon one of the others remarked,
"Well, we Gentlemen v. Players!"
The result can be imagined.

The Combative Veteran
COLONEL Buller's tale of two old gentlemen coming to blows at the table reminded one of the story of the late Lord Fitz Warrine, Chichester, who died recently, aged 94.

When Lord Fitz Warrine was about 90, he was sitting, as was his custom, in the Carlton Club. Suddenly a member of the King's Household, whom he, owing to some family feud, detested, walked in, having just been elected.

Whereupon the veteran Lord Fitz Warrine rose from his armchair, took off his coat, and said, in much earlier Georgian language, "Come outside and fight!" For ever afterwards he dubbed the newly-elected member a coward.

Dawes and Dawes

WITH Mr. Sheriff, Mr. Barbusse, and Horst Anton Zweig as guests, the Old and Young P.E.N. (the fountain-pen and the nib, the pen and the pencil, &c.) had a very interesting dinner on January 14.
This is the one meal in the year at which ancient and modern meet.
An amusing incident occurred at the previous meeting of the P.E.N. Mr.
Dawes, the nephew of the American Ambassador, was expected and a Mr.
Dawes was announced. He mystified all hosts by saying that he had lived in Britain all his life and had never met General Dawes. The mystery was explained when another Mr.
Dawes arrived. The Mr. Dawes who claimed the first as his guest.

WOMAN'S THOUGHTS

Inanimate Enemies Still at Work

Mary MacLeod Moore writes in the London Daily Telegraph:

There are times when one is tempted to believe, against one's better judgment, that inanimate objects have minds and dispositions, usually unpleasant; and that combinations of circumstances have something almost human in their maliciousness.

Perhaps if we were turned in the mysteries of the stars and of the meaning of signs and wonders all would be clear to us. As it is, we can only bear as patiently as may be with what has been called "the cussedness of inanimate objects"; we must bow our heads, so to speak, until the storm be past.

On the days when these silent, intangible enemies are at work all goes awry. As children we were told that we had got out of bed on the wrong side on the days we were cross and peevish, when we broke what we were told to hold, or lost what we were quite sure had never been out of our sight for a moment. Now, as grown-up people, we find that the hidden enemies are still at work. How else account for the times when the affairs of the day, instead of running on oiled wheels, catch and creek, delay us, and disarrange us from the hour we get up late for breakfast and find the fishmonger has not sent the kippers until we go to bed at night to discover that the hot-water bottle has chosen this unsuitable moment to leak?

The fountain-pen refuses to write when one has only a hurried five minutes for an urgent note; the scissors disappear, only to be found later on in the same place wearing an air of conscious virtue; a ladder starts, as if by magic, in the favourite silk stockings you have put on for a luncheon party; and a rip in your glove arrives to disgrace you before the severe family solicitor.

If there be nothing in this idea of malice in things and in circumstances, why, when you are economically combining the mortification of splashed stockings and a cold in the head, does a quite unexpected guest, whose eyes are like similes, arrive before you have time to hide traces of these afflictions? Why, when you are rumpled after a "fitting" and the fire is low, because you are soon leaving the room to dress for a party, does the maid announce visitors from a distance who have hitherto seen you looking neat and alert?

Why... But in the breasts of a host of persons this query is echoing, and for none of us is there any answer.

PARIS MODE

That the Paris mode has definitely entered into a new phase is made more evident by the sweeping clearance of last season's models at all the important sales at Home.

We are all infected by the new mode in spite of the invective hurled at it by many critics, who were—in some instances—more extreme than the fashions, as they appeared to indicate only one length for all occasions instead of three for separate occasions.

The evening mode is a thing apart, and we hardly know what definite influence criticism will have brought to bear upon it until the new openings this month and next month. In the meantime, the Riviera season looms ahead, and Paris has been busy early suiting the smart woman with advance early spring fashion. Fashion retailers will be all agog from now on until then, following the trend for morning, sports, and afternoon clothes.

Dressmaking

Evelyn Matteson of Grundy County, Illinois, was awarded the grand prize for dressmaking with a green organdy gown which she displayed for the camera at the International Live Stock Exhibition at Chicago.

WAIST LINES

A new note is developed in waist lines by a corselet skirt fitted round the high waist of a grey tweed morning suit. The corselet in this instance is made at an all-round height, with open cuts slotted at intervals on the normal waist line to show the colour of the blouse in butcher blue linen. Schiaparelli modifies this line for a less slim figure by only affecting the corselet at the front of a skirt by gradually sloping a point downwards towards the back where the skirt rests at the normal.

This particular corselet creates a slimming line in black and white tweed, as it buttons on to a white blouse at the point in front.

NEW TORSADE SCARF

The new torsade scarf made with two strips of different coloured crepe de Chine cut on the bias and twisted round in torsade fashion substitutes the buttoning principle. It rolls round the neck, to tie through buttonholes made in the point of the corselet, and is an attractive splash of colour in green and Chamberlain red on the long-sleeved hand-knitted woollen pull-over, and against the fine white "foulette" luncheon suit.

These corselet waists must be largely responsible for the dearth of belts. A half-and-half system is applied in black patent leather at one side only of a second model, which is an effective ensemble in black and pink.

GOING-AWAY ENSEMBLE

More interest is being taken in the going-away gowns of fashionable brides since the development of the ensemble idea in dress.

A bride of December 17, Miss Peggy Leigh, changed into a particularly pleasing afternoon gown after her wedding with Mr. Charles Graves at St. Margaret's, Westminster.

The dress, a Martial Armand creation, was of Burgundy crepe satin, the dull surface being used for the dress and detachable cape-collar.

When the cape is removed it reveals a silver guipure lace yoke. This under a beautiful squirrel coat, accompanied by the grey velvet hat, rather like a Dutch girl's cap, completed the ensemble.

SPORTS CLOTHES

Sports clothes have naturally escaped radical changes in outline, as it is a mode that must, first of all, remain practical for the fleet-footed tennis player, the yachtswoman, and golfer.

On this score the sports specialists have the field to themselves, with the below-knee length level, and skirts are no longer or shorter than this length which all well-dressed women fostered during the summer.

But sports styles become more individual through details and the independent touch that forges a new note. On all points Schiaparelli goes sailing gaily ahead in her own inimitable way, resisting all outside influences, to follow her own ideas and ideals.

Her skirts have never been too short, anyhow, and the only added length that seems to appear is when she supplies her collection with a few afternoon models. One of these is made to replace her effective pinafore dress made in two shades of linen or crepe de Chine for the summer season.

It is one of those utility frocks stepped into with the greatest ease, so to speak, as it is wrapped round the body and fastened with ties. This time the order of things is reversed, and it crosses over in front instead of at the back, to tie on the waist line at one side of a cross-over bodice above a full and all-round hand-pleated skirt.

Dots and Dashes

Dots and dashes, and modernistic patterns are decorating the newest sports costumes. Above is shown a royal blue jersey dress with white polka dots.

EVENING WRAPS

The evening wrap of attractive character is always a good purchase for the woman who attends the wide social round; the present reduction in furs may possibly allow of the winter wrap being plentifully trimmed with fine skins.

Most women realise that in the winter their evening wrap is more often on than off. At any rate, if not, it will be generally reposing on the back of a chair or theatre stall, so it is wisdom to spend all we can afford on obtaining a decorative garment.

Here we must consider the important decision of length, and the three-quarter coat for the evening appeals strongly to many women. Another type of model shows the trained coat, but this is a choice more suitable for the rich woman who can afford to possess an evening coat to match each frock! One point in favour of the three-quarter coat is that on really cold evenings it can either be laid aside in favour of the big fur wrap or be worn under it.

This three-quarter length for early Spring will be widely accepted. Added to which, there is what may be termed a long three-quarter length, covering the knee, as well as the shorter choice. There always is the really long wrap as well, which, by dragging draperies and cunning devices, can be worn in a variety of ways to suit individual taste and requirements. In any case a cape or coat of sterling worth is a good investment at the mid-season.

In Silver Grey

This delightful coat is of silver grey caracul, trimmed with grey fox collar and cuffs, while the little helmet hat is of grey felt to tone.—Isobel, London.

EVENING ENSEMBLE

Novelty and Design in Shoes

"Sandalar" stands for a little shoe shop in Paris presided over by an American girl, Mary Lendelari. She has crammed such resourcefulness for novelty of design and manipulation of harmonious colour combinations into the brief period of her shoe designing career, that this shop is now famous throughout Europe.

Among the new models that were ushered in at the mid-season collection are some exceedingly smart shoes for town or country wear, and afternoon and evening shoes with beautiful lines and unusual touches of colour. Dahlia and a delightful tone of Burgundy are two of the most important colours, and both are combined with antelope and antique Indian brocade for evening wear. Antique Chinese brocade is another combination in blue and gold that is appealing as an evening ensemble with matching bag.

There is a general movement towards colour, and all artists have their own tones and tints. Crepe de Chine is an important medium with Sandalar, but the tendency is to use it combined with velvet in the same colour to match evening dresses.

Practically all evening shoes are strapped to follow Grecian sandal lines. Charming effects are achieved by the applique of leather on silks and kids in many combinations of colour. Among the mules, which are all intriguing and individual for the boudoir and indoor wear, are most delicious little pull-man slippers made to match a pull-man robe all worked out in an extremely attractive ensemble.

Parisian Dressmaker

Mademoiselle Le Start has the distinction of being judged the best apprentice dressmaker in the French capital. She was awarded the blue ribbon after a competition with hundreds of others engaged in a similar occupation.

Sensible Footwear

Helen and Mildred Myers, of Eddyville, Nebraska, whose sensible footwear won in a contest conducted by the National 4-H Club at The International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago.

A BRIDE'S EMERALD RING

Unless a bride has decided views on the subject of engagement rings, it must be quite a pleasant way of spending the week to visit various jewellers to choose "just the right ring."

This problem has now been solved by Miss Delrdre Hart-Davis, whose engagement to Mr. Ronald Balfour is not very old. She says she had much difficulty in deciding between a lovely square-cut clear emerald and a cabochon gem, moulded oval and high in its setting. Her choice of an emerald has nothing to do with her birth month, as her stone is the ruby.

When she was a bridesmaid to Mrs. Grenfell last month she wore a large sapphire ringed round with diamonds, but this was only as a substitute until she had chosen her engagement ring.

CHAT ON COLOURS

The red of winter promises to continue, in darker effects, far into this year. The usual routine is that the brown and red of Autumn and Winter should give way to green and the mauve-purple range for Spring.

Fashion, however, is often sudden about a new colour craze. So far the mode shows a distinct liking for the sombre side of things.

Grey is considered smarter than beige. Blues in innumerable shades have, in some measure, supplanted green. Remarkable evening ensembles have been heard of in a papal-purple. Lavender is responsible for youthful frocks in organdy. White is certainly a leader in the Riviera modes. Pale apricot and a faint blush-pink are also sponsored by exclusive designers.

CIRCULAR MOVEMENT

The circular movement is still with us, especially for tweeds and in the firmer face cloths and hopsacks. The short rounded coat follows. The circular seamed skirt is smart, or in longer form has curved flounces, but the general tendency veers back to a variety of pleated skirts.

BOUDOIR FASHIONS

In boudoir fashions the exotic resuscitated smoking suits or elegant tea gowns are among garments that, if picked up cheaply, can do service for years.

Colour and fabric are important, and should be carefully considered. For the country home especially these garments are really helpful. The underdress of a tea gown which can be worn by itself, with a gorgeous coat of velvet or tissue—that can also be separated—will prove a useful as well as decorative possession.

Then the pyjamas or lounge suits, with "slacks" in satin or velvet, joined to a loose cosy blouse, and a short, or three-quarter, coat of some ultragorgeous coloured variety, are among other bargains for the country house parties.

OBSERVE THE HEM LINE

In picking up bargains of a more ordinary character it is wisdom to observe carefully the hem-line in coats and skirts, as to whether it is possible to alter it. Those godet uneven lines are impossible to change, unless they are separate bits applied on. Still, the probable tendency of the future will be to shorten, which is by no means so difficult as the lengthening process!

DEFINITE WINTER MODE

The mid-season has established that the mode for winter is very definite, and also portends the trend for early spring, and it is good to be able to record that the models generally approved of this season show excellent taste and certain lasting qualities.

Possibly the greatest interest is concentrated on the many different lengths which so largely determine man; phases in dress as it applies to coats, skirts, jumpers, and every changing fashion. The result of endless discussions gives more variation than ever. Certain practical laws have been accepted for the tailored and sports modes, such as skirts being three to four inches below the knee—the inch either up or down should always be an individual affair.

NOTE ON THE NEW CLOTHS

Tiny patterns in almost invisible checks and stripes—flecked spots or "splashes" are all among the new cloths. Tweeds of spring weight are of loose make, almost a basket weave, and the shaded jerseys are interesting. Hopack varieties and oatmeal clothes of bygone days are resuscitated in much improved aspects.

Tweeds have for some time been so becoming and soft in texture that in buying lengths we cannot go far wrong. Covert-coatings, gabardines, and serges in beige and navy are equally safe. Moire and poplin will run the taffeta of the future, very close. Nets and marquisettes will be used in all colours.

SHORT HIP-LENGTH COATS

All coats seem more becoming when properly proportioned; and the short hip-length for the young and slim is among early Riviera modes, also that exact half-length and the longer three-quarter model. In the more formal (dressier) daytime mode these coats can flare or godet, whereupon an inch or so added or eliminated is accepted at discretion. Some items are uneven; others dip in a definite direction.

For the evening the greatest latitude is permissible, but the dancing girl, if buying anything new, should secure one of those full-all-round-just-clear-the-ground frocks in silk or satin. This model being of a practical character, offers lasting possibilities. Yet the endless variety of flounces and frills are picturesque enough to have a place of their own, and will remain long enough to assure of all sorts of elegant and faithful frocks for the season. In the evening long skirts are predicted for a good while ahead, though here again much depends on type.

ORDINARY TAILORED SKIRTS

All ordinary "tailored" and sports skirts will neither be longer nor shorter—they have been just established in pretty practical proportions; and there is no reason for sudden change. The early Riviera modes show this. The increased desire for the box or finely pleated skirts assure of that straight slimmest that is so becoming, and generally wearable; and where it is easy the individual can put on or take off an inch or so without upsetting the laws of fashion and good style.

HOLLY AT A WEDDING

Captain Brian Kimmins and Miss Marjory Johnston, who were married on December 183 at Brompton Parish Church, had fine weather for the event.

Three pages, who held the hands of the small bridesmaids, in cream net frocks and carrying forget-me-nots, wore the green kilts of the Johnston tartan, and loose white muslin shirts with lace frills.

Capt. and Mrs. Kimmins are well remembered in connection with the Heritage Craft Schools at Chislehurst, and the soloist at the wedding was Mr. Sydney Northcote, organist and master of the choir at the Heritage.

The Bishop of London, with his picturesque cope, stood beside the Dean of York to officiate, and the red poinsettias and berried holly made seasonable decorations. Miss Johnston's dress of satin had a double train, and the long veil was edged with pearls.

POLITICAL SENSATION

Large Sum of Money Involved

RESTITUTION DEMAND

Legal Proceedings Started in Camera

The first proceedings have been taken in England in connection with an amazing political law action.

If the case comes on for trial it will probably prove to be one of the most sensational of the century.

The action arises out of a dispute concerning the recovery of a large sum of money alleged to have been paid by one individual to another, who, it is alleged, received it on behalf of a political party. Up to the present the proceedings have not gone beyond a private hearing in Chambers.

REDS IN EGYPT

House of Lords, Dec. 12.

The appearance of two different but most interesting personalities lent exceptional interest to a debate on the Government's policy in Egypt.

One was Lord Lloyd, lately High Commissioner in Egypt, whose virtual dismissal from that post by the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Henderson, was a sensation of the early days of the present Government.

The other personality was Viscount Grey, one of the few remaining "Elder Statesmen," the Foreign Secretary at the outbreak of the Great War whose appearances in the House lately have been very rare. He is in his seventieth year, but the effortless memory which enabled him to deliver a lengthy speech without any notes was in strong contrast to the style of Lord Lloyd, his junior by 18 years, who read from a typewritten document.

Speaking as a Liberal he defended the Government, and supported the argument of Lord Parmoor, the Socialist leader, that the new treaty made no real change in the policy laid down in the famous Declaration of 1922.

There was one pathetic moment in Lord Grey's speech when, desiring to quote from a printed paper some words by the late Lord Curzon, he adjusted dark spectacles to his eyes, but, even when holding the paper within an inch of them, was unable to find the place. Lord Reading stepped quickly forward, and read the quotation for him.

Vital Interests

The discussion took place on an official Conservative motion regretting the precipitancy of the Government's policy in Egypt, and the risk entailed to our Imperial communications. In moving it the Marquess of Salisbury said: We had nothing to be ashamed of in our policy in Egypt. We had, it is true, served British interests, but we had not neglected Egyptian interests, and the process of redemption was by no means completed. The development of the Sudan was in its infancy and would require many years of the best administration to make real prosperity in that country and real happiness for the people.

Yet within less than a month of the coming into office of the present Government they set themselves to make—in appearance at any rate—a radical change in our policy in Egypt, and, in order that it should be advertised in every part of the East, might have its due effect in every bazaar, they dismissed the High Commissioner.

I say that, having regard to the extreme delicacy and importance of the interests involved, such conduct by the Government, in less than three weeks after they had acceded to office, showed a levity and want of regard which I do not go too far in criticising as precipitate.

We must sometimes speak in clear terms. There must always be certain regions outside the Empire in regard to which we have interests so important that we cannot allow the interference of other Powers.

In that matter we might be content to follow the example of the United States. They do not hesitate to say where their interest lies, and as there is a Monroe Doctrine which they profess, there ought to be a Monroe Doctrine which we profess.

It ought to be insisted on in the world of diplomacy that there are certain regions where British interests are so clamant that we cannot allow the interference of any other Power.

Suez Canal Menaces. Lord Lloyd criticised in detail the new draft treaty, and dealing first with the military provisions declared that the safety of the Suez Canal was of such vital importance to the Empire that not even the smallest risk could be taken regarding it.

So long as we retained command of the seas there could be no menace from north and south. The canal could only be menaced from east and west. If danger came from the east, it could only be met from the west with a secure base in Egypt itself. If the danger came from the west, it could only be met from an Egypt torn by internal strife with risks of grave disaster and sabotage of the canal. For such an eventuality the troops placed on the canal were situated in the worst position of all.

The only place from which the Canal could be adequately defended from internal Egyptian disorder was from Cairo.

"The main danger," he continued, "must arise from a disturbed Egypt. What you are doing is to move into a desert away from the place where the trouble alone can arise, the place where you can least well handle it when it has arisen."

Another grave and dangerous part of the treaty was Article 6 whereby we abandoned without a single safeguard the protection of the lives and property of foreigners, which had been the keystone of our policy in Egypt. That safeguard depended mainly on the efficiency and discipline of the military and police forces and upon the probity and impartiality of Egyptian law courts.

Lord Lloyd went on to complain at length of the withdrawal of British officers from the Army and the judicial administration and continued:

Let us then be quite clear as to what this treaty means in regard to the protection of foreigners' interests. British troops are to be removed from Cairo and Alexandria; British control from the Egyptian Army; British personnel from the police; and British influence from the Ministry of the Interior, leaving British and foreign lives and property to the sole defence of the Egyptian Parliament.

Letting in the Reds

There is every reason to fear that the Bolsheviks, at any rate, whose nefarious influence has hitherto by constant vigilance and firmness been kept out of Egypt, seek in these impending changes the opportunity for making of Egypt what they have made of China and more recently of Palestine—a new theatre of war against law and order and a new forcing ground for grave racial and religious animosities.

Lord Parmoor, for the Government, replied to a question by saying that the return of Egyptian troops to the Sudan had the full approval of the Governor-General of the Sudan, but the British Government intended fully to carry out Lord Milner's policy there.

In Egypt itself the aim of the British Government was to secure independence for the country, while safeguarding the essential interests of Great Britain.

Viscount Grey severely criticised Lord Lloyd's speech, and agreed generally with Lord Parmoor. The Declaration of 1922, he said, recognised Egypt as an independent sovereign State, and we must regard it as having made a clean sweep of our interference in foreign affairs in Egypt.

Lord Thomson, the concluding speaker for the Government, dealt with the military position and contended that the Suez Canal, when the treaty operated, would be as safe as, and probably safer than, under the present arrangements.

Lord Salisbury's motion was carried by 46 to 13, and the House rose at 7.53 p.m.

OPERA SEASON

'Luccia di Lammermoor' a Success

The continued success of the Italian Grand Opera Company was shown by an appreciative audience at the Star Theatre last evening at the performance of "Luccia di Lammermoor."

The hearty applause accorded to the members of the Company was a sure indication of the pleasure with which this Company was received by the local community.

The opportunities of hearing first class opera in this Colony are few and far between, but there is no doubt that the rendering of such operas by talented companies, such as the Italian Grand Opera Company, are fully realised.

Special mention must be made of Miss de Alencar, capably assisted by Signor Casanova, Signor Ghetti and Signor N. Batistoni, who showed all expectations. In the danger scene in Egypt itself, if the danger came from the west, it could only be met from an Egypt torn by internal strife with risks of grave disaster and sabotage of the canal. For

"HELENA MAY"

Opening of Branch in Kowloon

TRIBUTE TO LADY LAMPSON

The Kowloon branch of the Helena May Institute was opened yesterday afternoon by Lady Clementi, M.B.E. The building is at No. 8, Aimal Villas, Austin Road. There was a large gathering of members and friends present.

Before the building was officially opened, Mrs. J. R. Wood made the welcome announcement that a donation of $1,000 for the upkeep of the new house had been received from Mr. Ho Kom-tong.

Mrs. Wood then addressed the gathering reviewing the history of the Institute.

Lady Clementi's Address

Lady Clementi said inter alia—We have met here to-day under the shadow of a great sorrow. Lady Lampson, wife of the British Minister to China, died here yesterday. At first it seemed as if, as a mark of respect to her memory, we should put off our gathering here this afternoon; but then I realized that to do so was exactly what she herself would least have wished. Lady Lampson had a very vital personality. When one had had the privilege of meeting her, one was not likely to forget her. She had the gifts of a rare intelligence, a delightful sense of humour and a warm sympathy with other people's interests, the sort of person to whom one would instinctively turn for help and advice. I was greatly looking forward to a few days of her society, and had thought she might be here to-day. I know the best tribute one can pay to her is to get on with the work in hand.

We have all got a bit tired of Women's Movements (with a big W and a big M), but I think at Helena May we can claim that we work in no aggressive or self-conscious spirit. We are indeed delighted to welcome our men friends, delighted to see many of them here to-day, and hope they will come again.

In the names of all members of the Helena May, I want to thank the Kowloon Committee, who under Mrs. Wood's chairmanship have worked simply wonderfully to get things ready for to-day. How much work goes to making a house habitable every woman knows, and the Committee has really been marvellous. It is a great delight to me to see it before I go.

After she had declared the branch open by signing the visitors' books with a gold fountain pen, which Mrs. Wood presented to her as a memento of the occasion, Lady Clementi was presented with a bouquet of flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Ho Kom-tong then signed the book and were followed by others present.

Mr. Ho Kom-tong also addressed the gathering.

AT THE MAJESTIC

Picture and Vaudeville Shows

There is a double attraction programme at the Majestic Theatre, Kowloon, comprising "The Sunset Derby," the "High Steppers" and "The Dancing Trio." The former is a story of the race track, intensely interesting, and strikingly lacking in the threadbare plot and situations which generally grace pictures of this kind.

A First National picture produced by Charles R. Rogers, it is a story of a jockey—and, of course, a girl as well—who agrees to ride a small trainer's only horse as a favour, and is injured in an accident, and receives only to find the accident has caused him to lose his nerve for riding.

From that point the story progresses to a climax full of drama and thrills and the grand "wind-up" comes in a race that is as perfectly staged as any event on the screen, with a thrill almost as real as if one were really watching from the grandstands with a bookmaker's ticket on the hero's horse.

Mary Astor and William Collier, jun., make an ideal pair, the former in the girl for whom the jockey offers to enter the race. Her personality and beauty have never been seen to better advantage. Collier's performance as the jockey is wholly convincing.

"The High Steppers" and "The Dancing Trio" are comprised of well-known vaudeville stars, who have appeared in many of the well-known theatres of the world. "The Dancing Trio" are added to the 8.30 and 7.20 p.m. performances. The three dancers are well versed in their art, and gave delightful exhibitions of classical, jazz and acrobatic dancing. The combined company of "The High Steppers" and "The Dancing Trio" appear at the 8.30 p.m. show. Since their reappearance last Thursday they have had packed houses and have drawn every ounce of applause and laughter from the delighted audience with their clever dancing, acrobatic turns, happy dancing, and popular songs.

BESSIE LOVE

In Big Film Revue at Queen's

VERSATILE ARTIST

When Bessie Love went on the stage some months ago "for the experience," she received more screen offers than ever before, she relates. "Few of my friends realise that I was definitely putting the motion picture business behind me," says the star of "The Broadway Melody," now a leading figure in the cast of "The Hollywood Revue," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's musical extravaganza coming to-morrow to the Queen's Theatre.

"I was bound for New York and the stage, and my agent here on the coast was turning down one offer after another when 'Broadway Melody' came along. It looked too good to refuse, so he wired me to come home from vaudeville and make one picture before going to New York."

"On the day the picture was finished I packed and bought a ticket for New York. Next day I went to the studio for a short visit and was on my way out when Irving Thalberg saw me. He called me and said he wanted to talk to me. The result of this conversation was a five-year contract and the abandonment of my ambition to become a stage success."

In "The Hollywood Revue" Bessie has another opportunity to display her versatility as a singing and dancing revue artist. She appears alone in a singing and dancing act and as the central figure with Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, and again with Charles King, Gus Edwards, "Ukelele Ike," Marie Dressler and Polly Moran.

EDMUND LOWE

Edmund Lowe has a substantial claim to the title of "the most versatile leading man in films."

A very few years back Lowe was continually cast in romantic leads of the Elinor Glyn type of story. He played them so successfully that he was called the "matinee idol of the screen."

Right when he seemed doomed for ever to play such roles Raoul Walsh decided to take a long chance, or rather play a hunch he had, and selected him for the hard-boiled role of "Sergeant Quirt" in "What Price Glory." Screen history records what Lowe did with that role.

More recently Lowe was a real sensation in "Dressed to Kill," in which he played "Mile-Away Barry," leader of a crook gang and a fashion plate. Currently at the Queen's he is hard-boiled again as "Sergeant Mickey Dunn," of the Mounted Patrol in Fox Films first feature-length movie-talking drama, "In Old Arizona," a Raoul Walsh production directed by Irving Cummings. Warner Baxter and Dorothy Burgess are featured, and there is a brilliant all-star supporting cast. The picture is from a story by Tom Barry, who also wrote the dialogue.

NIGHT CLUBS

The night club is the common meeting ground of high and low, successful and unsuccessful, and the night club hostess, by the very nature of her job, must consort with all. She cannot, must not, pick and choose.

Many an interesting story lies behind the career of night club entertainers, or "hostesses," as they are now called. Necessity alone has not brought them to this calling. There is the girl of good family looking for a thrill; there is the adventuress, who finds more opportunity for gold digging here than anywhere else; there is the ambitious husband hunter who seeks a wider field for meeting men of means than in her own circle.

The girl of good family who looks for a thrill plays with fire. She is open to all sorts of experiences, and if she gets off with only her fingers burnt she can thank her lucky star.

As for the adventuress, the night club is a fertile field, and one well worth her efforts. She knows how to take care of herself and is experienced enough to differentiate between the wheat and the chaff.

Little enough as it is, most can be said for the husband-hunting hostess. She is a "climber," and there is no denying the sporting element in her make-up. She is willing to take her chance of landing the son of some old family.

The girl who, through lack of training, has to depend on social graces only to pull her through is to be pitied. The life goes against her grain. She is a victim of circumstances. Such a one is portrayed by Irene Rich in "Dazzle," her new picture. She is thrown on the world without any visible means of support for herself, and her college-bred boy but her talent for singing and charming personality. Her struggles to pull herself out of the rut and win success are intensely interesting. William Collier, jun., Randolph, "Douglas," and "Edna" are featured in "Dazzle," which is being shown at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow.

FAIRLEA SCHOOL

"Merchant of Venice" in Chinese

ANNUAL SPEECH DAY

Yesterday was the annual Speech Day of the Fairlea Girls' School. The function was held in the afternoon in the St. Stephen's Girls' College Hall, Lyttelton Road.

There was a large gathering of students of the School together with their parents and friends. The programme opened with the School hymn, after which a few of the senior students presented the "Merchant of Venice" in Chinese. They all acquitted themselves well and were deservedly applauded by the enthusiastic audience.

Afterward Mrs. S. W. Ts'o gave away the certificates to the successful students. She was supported on the platform by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Duppuy, Chairman, the Hon. Dr. S. W. Ts'o, O.B.E., LL.D., Mr. Kwok Shiu-lan, members of the School Council, and Mrs. Cheung, head mistress.

Bishop's Tribute

Before calling upon Mrs. Cheung to read the School report, Bishop Duppuy said that he was glad that he had arrived in time to see the play from Shakespeare. It was the first time that he had seen the "Merchant of Venice" presented in Chinese and from appearance he could see that those who took part enjoyed speaking their lines as much as those watching their acting. He thanked them for their excellent entertainment.

Mrs. Cheung then explained that as Fairlea was a vernacular school, she would read the report in Chinese. She welcomed all who had attended and thanked the Bishop and Mrs. Ts'o for their kindness in officiating at the Speech Day.

In the course of her report, Mrs. Cheung thanked Miss Vincent for the help which she had rendered to Fairlea during the absence of Mrs. Cooper, and welcomed the latter back to her work in both the school and the boarding house.

Sports Enthusiasm

At the second annual sports of the school held in November, the students showed great enthusiasm and the school championship prize was won by Class VI. Both the boarders and day-girls played netball, and some of the boarders had made a good beginning at tennis.

Mention was also made of the energy and help willingly given by the students at the M.C.L. Sale. The Senior students presented the "Merchant of Venice" which drew great crowds at each performance and resulted in a net profit of $500.

New Middle School

After the Chinese New Year, a Middle School would be opened in which they hoped to train students for work in their schools. They hoped to continue the work of the school and strengthen it by remembering what St. Paul said: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

Prior to inviting Mrs. Ts'o to give away the certificates, Bishop Duppuy congratulated Mrs. Cheung, the staff and students of Fairlea on their fine work during the year just reviewed.

Fairlea, he said, had had an existence of 38 years of thorough educational work behind it. With such a good record of achievement they were now taking a new step by the establishment of a Middle School, which would open a new chapter in its life of usefulness.

The values of a Middle School, he said, are many and he would enumerate a few for them: (1) it is useful in improving general education, and to help to increase interest in life for those who pass through it; (2) it would serve as a link between Fairlea and the University. At present one-third of the women students at the University were from St. Stephen's Girls' College, and he hoped that Fairlea's Middle School would in time contribute in corresponding numbers; (3) it helped towards the training of teachers. Fairlea already had a reputation for this work, and the Middle School would help greatly towards the qualification of those wishing to take up the teaching profession. He hoped that Fairlea would continue to send out a stream of qualified teachers; (4) it would help Fairlea to do something which was referred to by Lady Clement in that last last week—supply well trained women for the noble profession of nursing and thus help build up in China a service which was a great need.

Appeal to Parents

In conclusion, the Bishop asked the support of all parents for the Middle School, to try to make it a big thing in the life of Fairlea. Referring to Mrs. Ts'o, Bishop Duppuy said that he was very happy because no one had identified himself so much in the education of the Colony as Dr. Ts'o, and Mrs. Ts'o had shared in that. (Applause.)

After Mrs. Ts'o had given away the certificates, Mrs. Ts'o spoke a few words in Chinese, thanking the School on its 38th anniversary and the staff and students for their work during the past year.

friendly matches with local teams, and on seven occasions we proved victorious. Growing interest was also taken in ping pong, as we received our School Tournament. Over thirty of our best ping pong players entered their names for the contest, and as a result Chan Poshai came out Champion, and Chan Wai-ming runner-up.

We had two picnics this year. On May 1 we walked to Chuen Wan and had an enjoyable swim near the house of Mr. G. N. Orme. On October 9 we had an interesting excursion through Aberdeen and Kowloon Bay to Stanley, where we were entertained with great hospitality by St. Stephen's College, to which we owe a word of thanks and appreciation.

Defective Eyesight

The health of the school was satisfactory on the whole. But in view of the great number of new entrants found with defective eyesight, I should advise guardians to stop their children from reading Chinese books of small print.

In conclusion I should thank the whole staff for their loyal assistance and co-operation in all work of the school.

Appeal to Parents

In conclusion, the Bishop asked the support of all parents for the Middle School, to try to make it a big thing in the life of Fairlea. Referring to Mrs. Ts'o, Bishop Duppuy said that he was very happy because no one had identified himself so much in the education of the Colony as Dr. Ts'o, and Mrs. Ts'o had shared in that. (Applause.)

After Mrs. Ts'o had given away the certificates, Mrs. Ts'o spoke a few words in Chinese, thanking the School on its 38th anniversary and the staff and students for their work during the past year.

REBELS PURSUED

Progress of the Kwangsi Campaign

VANGUARDS AT FUCHEUN

Canton, Thursday.

The 59th and 60th Divisions, after having successfully captured Laipo and Shouyen on the 20th, are now hot on the heels of the Kwangsi rebels, who have entrenched themselves at Liuchow.

General Chu Shao-liang, of the 6th Army Route, who is responsible for the capture of Kweilin, has directed his armies to continue the pressure on the enemy; his vanguards are now at Fucheng. As soon as they reach Kungcheng, mid-way between Kweilin and Fucheng, the general offensive will begin against Liuchow and Kweilin.

It is further reported that the Ironsides appear to evacuate Liuchow and to march into Hunan, while the Kwangsi remnants seem to head for Kweichow.

Pinglok, Thursday.

A telegram from Commander Yu Hon-mow states that his army occupied Pinglok on January 18, after a brief encounter with the enemy. Another telegram from Commander Heung Hon-ping said that he would lead his army into Pinglok on January 19, preparatory to launching an attack on Kweilin.—Canton News Agency.

Doug Davis, crack Atlanta pilot, plans to fly his "mystery plane" between New York and Los Angeles early in the spring. He expects to make the flight in twelve hours. The present record is held by Captain Hawks, who made the trip in seventeen hours. Davis is holding the cup he won as the meritorious flyer of 1929.

LOST MASTERPIECE

A Stolen Rembrandt Recovered

The Rome police have recovered a painting by Rembrandt which was stolen from the palace of Prince Massimo on the night of November 13-14. The picture is that of an old man with a beard and is said to be valued at about 500,000 lire.

It seems that the thieves, after taking this picture and another of less value off the wall, penetrated into the apartment of the Prince's sister, where they seized jewels worth about 20,000 lire. They also visited the chapel dedicated to the memory of Paolo Massimo, who was temporarily restored to life by St. Philip Neri. There they filled a sack with silverware of very great value. The thieves, however, appear to have been disturbed and were compelled to leave behind the sack, which was found thrown away in a corner.

The pictures and jewels have now been discovered in the attic of a house in the Fiano Romano, where they had been concealed among old carpets and furniture. Two young men have been arrested, together with a number of suspected accomplices.

THE NEW EMPRESS OF JAPAN

INCREASING THE SPEED OF VESSELS

C.P.R. LINER LAUNCHED

A heavy fog on the Clyde somewhat obscured the launch of the new Canadian Pacific liner, the Empress of Japan. The launch, however, was successfully originated by Mrs. E. R. Peacock, wife of one of the directors of the company, and the ship was brought round to the east dock at the Fairfield yard, where it will lie until it is completed in June. In the fog the ship looked perhaps even more impressive than one had expected. It is painted white, with a blue line, and its great height towering over the crowd on the road was paler than the sky. The foot of the ship rose steeply into the launching platform upon which the guests had gathered, and about it the heads of the neighbouring slipways rose through the fog. On one of them, close by the ship, a party was helping in the directing of operations, but the fog was so thick they could not see the two hundred yards to the river. "I can hear a noise on the river, but what it is I don't know," one shouted.

A Good Launch

At length the "all clear" was given. Mrs. Peacock released the cradle holding a bottle of champagne, and after a moment's delay the great structure began to move, at first silently, then with a noise like the cracking of ice as she gained way. The crowd cheered and the ship moved on, taking up with a roar the cables that held to land. Her white stern vanished into a fog which was so thick that only the watchers on the far end of the quay could see whether she bowed three times to her lady sponsor as a well-behaved ship should.

The name of the Empress of Japan is already familiar in the Pacific Ocean. An earlier ship of that name, armed as an auxiliary cruiser, helped the Himalaya and two other Empress to blockade German supply ships in Manila, and later took a hand in the recapture of the Exford, which the famous Emden had seized. The new Empress of Japan is to be the largest, fastest, and most luxurious ship engaged on the Pacific route from Vancouver to Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Manila. Her older sister, the Empress of Canada, has made the journey in eight days, ten hours, fifty-three minutes; the Empress of Japan, engined to travel 21 knots on service, should make the journey in eight days, saving one day on the usual crossing. She is designed to carry 400 first-class passengers, 164 second-class, 100 third-class, and 548 Asiatic steerage passengers.

The first-class passengers, who will pay $60 or $70 for the journey across the Pacific, will have all the luxuries which the furnisher can devise, and their children will play in a room whose exterior will look like a red tiled cottage standing in a flower garden.

Although the ship is to be thus luxuriously equipped with the incidentals of the expensive life there is also much room left for cargo, and 60,000 cubic feet of it will be required for the silk-room. The length of the ship is 605ft., its height 107ft., its gross tonnage 26,000 tons. One can imagine that, completed, with her three funnels above and her opulence below, she will be an attractive vessel.

Higher-Speed Ships

Upon this eastern trip the need for speed is not measurable in terms of the Atlantic journey. Nevertheless, Captain Gilles, the general manager of the company's steamships, predicted a general increase in the speed of both passenger and cargo vessels, and pointed out that the Empress of Japan, thought not unconventional in design, would give a higher speed on service than her predecessor with the same weight of machinery and size of oil-fuel bunkers. She is to be driven by Parsons type turbines and Yarrow type boilers. He predicted also that the new Empress of Britain, to be commissioned in 1931, would make the run from Southampton to Quebec in five days. He was inclined to think that a four-day crossing of the Atlantic would approach the limit of the powers of surface ships. In conclusion he paid warm compliments to the Fairfield Yard for rapidity of construction and quality of their work.

Sir Alex. M. Kennedy, the chairman of the Fairfield Company, expressed some pride in the association of the two concerns, and recalled that this was the twelfth ship the yard had constructed for the Canadian Pacific Railway. Sir Alex. deplored the mistakes of politicians and their effect upon industry, but admitted that during the last twelve months shipbuilding had been in a rather better state than for many years. Though the immediate outlook was not so favourable, they must not be discouraged.

BURNS NIGHT

Celebration by St. Andrew's Society

"THE IMMORTAL MEMORY"

Local Scotsmen gathered in large numbers at the Hong Kong Hotel last night for a dinner in honour of the memory of the Scottish bard, Robert Burns. The Chieftain of St. Andrew Society, Mr. A. H. Ferguson, took the chair, and the immortal memory of Robert Burns was ably reviewed by Professor Simpson.

The company was piped to the dining hall by Pipe Major W. C. K. Mackie, Mr. P. D. Wilson and Mr. G. Nisbet. During the course of dinner the haggis was ceremoniously carried in by Mr. J. T. Grant to the skirl of the pipe by Pipe-Major Mackie.

A Rare Menu

The bill of fare was a characteristic one. It consisted of:—

"And when those legs to guid, warm kail
Wi' welcome canna' bear me:
A lee dyke-side, a sybow-tail,
And barley-scotch shall cheer me."
Sheep's Heid Broth
"Wi' Kail an' Beef."
Loch Fyne Herrin an' Tatties
"An' a refreshin' synd o' nappy liquor."

HAGGIS

"Auld Scotland wants me skinking
That jumps in luggies."
Roastit Mutton: Bashed Tatties an' Meeps
"As licht as lammas."
Scotch Dumplings
"Food like the wame, an' keeps us livin'."
Bannocks an' Cheese
"Weel-hair'd Kebbuck."
The Barley Bree
Nae Heel Taps
Wi' merry sangs an' friendly cracks,
I wat we will na weary.

"A Wee Drapple"

Seating at a "horse-shoe" table, with the poet's portrait behind the Chairman, the party honoured the loyal toast with a wee drapple. Before calling on Professor Simpson to propose the toast of the evening, the Chairman thanked those present for the support given. They were, however, very sorry at not having their Vice-President, Mr. K. Gieg, and the Rev. F. C. Young with them.

He hoped that both the absentees would soon be restored to normal health.

The Immortal Memory

Professor Simpson, of the University, who gave "The Immortal Memory" of Robert Burns, said inter alia:—

Mr. President and Brother Scots, it is a great honour for me to propose "The Immortal Memory." The honour is all the greater in the presence of a president called Ferguson. Everywhere in the life of Burns one comes across that familiar name. Ferguson was the name of the gentleman who welcomed Burns's father from Kinross-shire to Ayr, and lent him $100 to set up farm in Mount Oliphant (Laughter.) Ferguson was also the name of a young Scottish poet, born nine years before Burns, who died a youth when Burns was only a lad, but left behind him some local Scots poetry which was the earliest and the strongest poetic inspiration of our national laureate. Then again, professor called Ferguson, that Sir Walter Scott, when a boy of fifteen, met Burns in the first glow of his fame. Ferguson, moreover, was the name of the winner in that famous contest between "three noble chieftains," which Burns described in a poem called "The Whistle." Reflections like these are an added inspiration in the present company.

True to Native Songs

It is often declared with awe and admiration that in Italy the common people still sing the songs of their great poets. The same can be said of Scotland. Scotland is probably the only country in the world that has resisted the contagion of "coal-black mammites" and "ukelele honays" and "saxophone music." In Scotland there is a body of popular native song strong enough to stand against this invasion, because our children make their first acquaintance with song and poetry in their own homes by learning "Ye Banks an' Braes o' Bonnie Doon," or "O' a' the Airts the Wind can Blaw" or the address to "A Mountain Daisy" or even "Tam O' Shanter."

Respect for Press

Although we may not make daily use of such wonderful words as "wanchance" and "lapanseerie," we have them ready when a worthy occasion presents itself. We remember a phrase like "Whistle o'er the lave o't," on the many occasions when "Manke" is not strong enough. (Laughter.) We know that there is no English equivalent for "unco guid." Nature and man and beast are illuminated for us by the glamour which Burns threw over them. We see in our dogs the Laith or the Caesar of that poem which

BOXING AND FIGHTING

THEORY v. PRACTICE WITH A DIFFERENCE

BASKING IN UNREALITY

A special correspondent of the London Observer wrote a few weeks ago:—

Most of those who are interested in boxing, as opposed to the sensation-hunting crowds who attend contests in search of thrills, have been disgusted by recent exhibitions. Contests such as the two between Stribling and Carnera will bring about the suppression of boxing, for they are obviously fights, which are illegal, and not contests of skill, which are permitted by law. Not that there is any need to shudder when sporting journalists hint at the fearful things Carnera might do if he got really angry. In an "all-in" fight the smaller and quicker man would almost invariably win. Witness the first fight between Carnera and Stribling. But it is a pity there should be this glorification of fighting as opposed to boxing, quite apart from the question of illegality. It is scarcely possible to pick up a paper without reading a criticism by some "sporting" journalist disparaging some boxer for not being "enough of a fighter," or expressing disgust that some contest proved to be a mere exhibition of boxing skill. I am not condemning fighting. There is much to be said for it as well as against. But to demand fighting in a glove contest under strict rules is to show confusion of thought.

Glove fighting has always been an artificial sport. Much ridicule has been poured on the alleged disqualification of Mr. B. J. Angles some fifty years ago, in an amateur boxing competition, for hitting too hard. Competitors in those days were sometimes told to box, not fight. But the principles upon which the referees and umpires of those days acted were logical. They were judging skill in boxing, and estimating that skill by the standards of bare knuckle fighting. A man could easily knock his hands to pieces in the old style, and judges bore that in mind. But glove fighting, logically considered, is an absurdity. To cover a man's fists with padded gloves to prevent him from doing damage with them, and then to measure his success by the damage he does, is farcical. Almost on a par with this is the prohibition of wrestling while clinching and holding in practice, though not in theory, permitted to an almost unlimited extent.

Pray Silence!

Yet there can be little doubt that the belief that they are to see something which approximates to a real fight is what draws the majority of the spectators to boxing matches. If proof of this were needed, it is to be found abundantly in the advertisements of promoters and the paragraphs inspired by managers. The finer points of boxing skill are hard enough to see, even when at the ring-side, and to appreciate them requires knowledge. But anyone can see a couple of heavyweights ponderously knock each other down, even from the Albert Hall gallery. There is a story, doubtfully true but well invented, of an M.C. who, during a heavyweight contest, stood up and proclaimed: "Mr. Goddard is about to hit with his right. The audience will kindly observe complete silence during the progress of the blow."

With all this talk of fighting, it is perhaps interesting to consider what relation modern glove fighting has to real fighting. The answer is, practically none. The fact that a man can beat another with gloves on is not the slightest proof that he could win without them. This was shown often enough in prize-ring days. One of the evils of the big heavyweight matches is the exaltation of bulk as against quality. The glove, with the advantage it gives to mere weight of hitting and the fact that it makes hooking and swinging safe for the hands, is all in favour of the big man. A much lighter blow with the bare knuckles will do all the damage necessary. Mace and Belcher were perhaps the best of the old-style pugilists, and the former weighed eleven and the latter not much over twelve stone. Tom Sayers was little over ten stone. There were big men like Gaunt and Perry (the Tipton Slasher), but the former was beaten by Bendigo, who weighed between eleven and twelve stone, and the latter by Sayers. Isaac Perrins, an eighteenth-century boxer, weighed seventeen stone, and was beaten by Johnson, a much smaller man.

Against the Rules
But even prize fighting with bare knuckles was a very artificial thing. A man was not allowed to kick. He could neither hit nor take hold below the belt. Butting, biting, and gouging were definitely against the rules, also throttling on the ropes. And, perhaps most important of all, when a man was down, even on one knee and hand, the fight was over for the time being. Yet the Japanese have shown that a man when "down," according to boxing rules, is often in a very strong position.

It is practically impossible by boxing alone to keep a man of equal strength and quickness, however unskilled, from closing. And once he has closed, boxing is finished with. So-called in-fighting is merely a product of modern glove-fighting rules, and if holding and wrestling were allowed in-fighting would be useless, if not impossible. Wrestling, however, has its own innumerable codges of rules, requiring or forbidding all sorts of holds, but usually declaring that a man is down and the bout ended when he is on his back. The Japanese systems of self-defence (I believe ju-jitsu and ken-jitsu are the technical terms) come nearer to reality. I believe there is also an Icelandic method of fighting akin to the Japanese, and the Cumberland wrestlers have stories of jealously guarded secret "death holds."

Ju-Jitsu
The ancient Greeks distinguished clearly between boxing, wrestling, and the pambatu. The last-named contest was apparently very like an old-style prize fight without restrictions. The nearest approach to real natural fighting was apparently the American rough-and-tumble fighting of the middle nineteenth century. Gouging, biting, and kicking, with other dirty tricks, were all included in this style, the best known exponent of which was probably John W. Morrissey, who once beat Heenan under prize-ring rules. Naturally, this disgusting method of fighting was not widely practised, as the comparatively civilised use of weapons made it impossible. It was, however, taught during the war as an adjunct to bayonet fighting. It is said that in the days of the prize-ring a distinction was drawn between "fighting" and "ruffianing," the latter being apparently a continuous rough-and-tumble. In Lancashire the "all-in" fight, including the use of clubs, was formerly practised.

The moral of all this is that we should get rid of fight talk in connection with boxing. It is a fine sport and good exercise, though limited in practice to a certain physical type, but it has little or no relation to self-defence or to fighting. The strength and quickness of a good boxer would, of course, be useful to him in any type of physical contest, but his boxing skill would be of little use. The Japanese ju-jitsu experts had, I believe, little difficulty in tying up Jim Jeffries, the biggest and heaviest man who ever held the World's Championship, and Yukio Tani used to give music hall exhibitions in which he easily dealt with Joseph, then our lightweight champion.

The Italo-Belgian Royal Wedding

Best Dressed Man

A Hotel in Diamonds

Like a story from the Arabian Nights is the description of the miniature model of the Royal York Hotel, shown at the Toronto Exhibition recently. The model is valued at over $300,000 and in its construction there were utilized more than $15,000 Ellis faultless quality diamonds. They were mounted on a framework composed of satin wood covered with the finest wax. The miniature was drawn true to scale and measured 15 inches high by 12 inches broad. Reflected from thousands of facets, the brilliant display of light, broken into all the colours of the spectrum, made this exhibit one of the most visited and most talked-of at the big Fall Fair.

Women Work Wires

Women make excellent telegraph operators, according to Mr. J. McMillan, general manager of the extensive Canadian Pacific Railway telegraph system. The advent of automatic sending and receiving instruments and other appliances eliminated much of the heavier work formerly done by men, and in addition to vastly speeding the service, gave an opportunity for efficient typists to become operators as the automatic machines have a keyboard like that of a typewriter, and a knowledge of telegraphic code is not needed. Recently forty per cent of the operators in the employ of the Canadian Pacific are women, showing a steady increase from twenty-two per cent in 1918. This photograph shows a girl operating one of the new automatic machines at the Vancouver General Office.

Certificated teachers from this society have been doing excellent work in Canada. From Far Victoria

LORD AND LADY SOMERS' KEEN INTEREST

Lady Somers, who is the State Commissioner of the Girl Guides' Association of Victoria, has done much to encourage the growth of this valuable movement in Victoria, while Lord Somers has been the inspiring of the Scout movement. They both enjoy camping out and joining in the joys of Guiding and Scouting. At the recent annual meeting of the Girl Guides, Association of Victoria, Lady Chancel presided as deputy State Commissioner, in the absence of Lady Somers, who was away with her husband touring the Mallee, but she sent a happy message to the meeting, and commended the fine spirit animating Guiding in Victoria. The Minister for Education (Mr. H. I. Cohen) also expressed his firm approval of Guiding. "People have suggested to me that Guiding should be made compulsory in State schools, but I feel that that would be contrary to the spirit of the movement," he said. "The Education Department will continue to give every facility for the advancement of the association, by placing schoolrooms, basket ball courts, and sports grounds at the disposal of guiders."

The "Old Scout's" Column.

Mrs. Southern's appeal Chinese to have more Chinese Guiders girls to join the local Girl Guide Movement is an appeal which I hope no Chinese young ladies in the Colony would turn a deaf ear. There is no gaining that we need many more Chinese girls to join up, and help to disabuse the seeming difference which is a barrier to a friendly relation between the girls of the West and those of the East. The Guide Movement in all parts of the world has done much to promote international good feeling and fellowship, and proud is the girl who belongs to the sisterhood of Guides.

Writing in the "Education" Mrs. Southern said: "The aim of the Girl Guide movement is to make efficient future women citizens, good housekeepers and mothers. It is all this and much more. It is in addition an adventure." We are apt as we get older to get into grooves—the day-dreams of youth are liable to fade when once we have stepped into our grown up niche. But in Guiding there is a spirit of romance and enterprise which time and age cannot dull. We are reaching out to an ideal of world-wide friendship, of joy in beauty, in Nature and Art, of merry wholesome fun indoors and out of doors. This is not "high falutin' talk."

"Here, in Hong Happy and Kong I look for Flourishing" ward to further developments of this great world movement. So far its

WARRANTS AND AWARDS

It will not be possible to estimate the increase in the number of Scouts during the past year until after the coming census. Figures have, however, come to hand which show that no less than 10,016 Scouters' Warrants have been issued during the past twelve months. Of this number, 6303 have been issued to persons who have never previously held a warrant in the Boy Scouts Association, and 3713 to previous warrant holders taking out new warrants. The actual number of warrants cancelled, representing the actual loss of Scouters to the movement, is 2230. These figures may appear to be very satisfactory, but whether the influx of Scouters has been sufficient to cope adequately with the estimated increase in the number of Scouts remains to be seen. During the year 97 awards for gallantry were made to Scouts under the jurisdiction of the Boy Scouts Association throughout the Empire.

CHINESE GUIDERS WANTED

MRS. SOUTHERN ASKS FOR CO-OPERATION

BRIGHT SIDE OF GUIDING

Owing to my sudden departure for England in consequence of my mother's illness, Miss Jaques is acting as Colony Commissioner and has taken over the compilation of the annual report. I am most grateful to her. Miss Jaques is fully occupied with her own work, but in true Guide-like spirit she has made time for these additional duties. I am very grateful to Mr. Ralphs (Acting Director of Education) for affording Miss Jaques facilities for coping with the extra Guide work. Mr. Ralphs' sympathy and interest have proved a very great help to us in furthering Guide interests in the schools.

Greatly to our regret Mrs. Remington had to go home early in the year owing to ill-health and Miss Jaques was appointed Assistant Colony Commissioner. We hope that Mrs. Remington will return to us completely restored to health for we miss her indefatigable spirit and many accomplishments in Guiding. I am very glad that Miss Sawyer has consented to act as District Commissioner for Kowloon. Miss Sawyer has had a great deal of experience of Guiding in India and her assistance and sympathy have already been of much value to us.

The Movement has consolidated considerably during the past year. We welcome heartily the formation of new Chinese companies and we hope that many Chinese girls will join the Training Class so that they may qualify to assist in forming new Companies and Packs. It is only through the whole-hearted co-operation of Chinese women and girls that we can make true meaning and aims of Guiding and disabuse the antagonistic or "enthusiastic" indifference.

Splendid and invaluable work in this direction has been achieved by Miss Esther Kotewall—herself a Guide, together with Miss Woo M.B.E., a pioneer in Guiding among the Chinese. Miss Kotewall has translated the Tenderfoot and Second Class Tests into Chinese and has produced an admirable little book with illustrations. This has been published at Miss Kotewall's own expense. We are deeply indebted to her for this admirable piece of work.

A very healthy sign has been the co-operation of many ladies of various communities as Vice-Presidents. It was my intention to ask these ladies to an informal discussion of our future plans, but this was impossible owing to my departure for home. I hope at some future time to carry out this idea. Meanwhile I thank them warmly for their readiness to assist in the Movement.

And to all those who have helped so loyally and whole-heartedly

BRITISH SCOUTS ABROAD

Each year the number of British Scouts who have journeyed abroad for their summer camps has increased. Last year, despite the fact that the World Jamboree was held at the beginning of August, some 7,000 British Scouts visited the Continent. A representative party attended the Spanish National Jamboree, held at Barcelona in connection with the great exhibition, and had a right royal time. The camp was most enjoyable, and the British boys created a very good impression with their smart and workmanlike ways. A party of Scouts from Hendon visited Gibraltar and Tangier. At Gibraltar they had a wonderful time, whilst at Tangier, where they were billeted in the Sultan's Palace, they found some difficulty in getting to sleep, owing to their luxurious surroundings. They were entertained, amongst others, by Spanish, Moorish, and Jewish Scouts, and had the time of their lives. When they were leaving Tangier they received a telegram of greeting from his Majesty King Alfonso of Spain.

It is expected that this year will see a further increase in the number of Scouts visiting foreign countries. And it is through these visits that the friendships made at Arrowe Park during the World Jamboree, between Scouts of almost every nation will be strengthened, and still stronger ties forged between the Scouts of the world.

In Guide and Brownie work in every capacity I send my heartfelt thanks.

We were very glad to welcome back our President Lady Clement, M.B.E., who is so actively and keenly interested in the Movement. Lady Clement met H.R.H. Princess Mary, Lady Baden Powell, Miss Hill (Overseas Commissioner) and other Guide leaders at home.

The Guides and Brownies of Hong Kong shared in the world-wide pleasure given by the news that His Majesty the King had conferred a Peerage on the Chief Scout, Mr. Waldegrave (Chief Commissioner, Hong Kong Boy Scouts) with his usual kindness allowed us to join in his telegram of congratulations to Lord Baden Powell. In this honour, the Chief Guide, Lady Baden-Powell has a large share. She is the indefatigable partner of his work, an inspiration to all with whom she comes in contact. Many times during the year I have received letters from her showing that her interest is personal and keen in our little corner of the Guide world.

Sir Montagu Burrows (Scout Commissioner for Special Tests) said at the Imperial Guide Camp at Foxlease in July 1928:—

"The Kingdom ruled over by the Chief Guide and Chief Scout is one of the largest in the World."

We in Hong Kong are proud to be subjects in that Kingdom and to

Of Interest To Guiders

Mrs. T. H. King, has taken over the duties of Mrs. D. R. Kinloch, as Colony's Secretary, of the local Guide Association.

The following ladies have joined the Association as Vice-Presidents:—Mrs. Wellington, Mrs. K. M. Talati and Mrs. R. E. Desai.

We congratulate the 2nd Kowloon Company on securing three trophies during the same year. They won the Prince of Wales' Banner, the R.S.P.C.A. Cup and the Tennis Cup. While we rejoice with this Company in its successes nevertheless we hope that other Companies will make a fight to wrest the trophies from them in the next competitions.

We give a warm welcome to all who have joined us. Some come for a long stay, others lend a hand willingly for any short time they are able to do so. These friends helped during the year and are with us still.—Miss R. Christian, Miss A. Tickner, Miss D. Christian, Miss MacNider, Miss Raymond, Miss P. Heney, Miss Oakley, Mrs. Rule, Miss E. Kwok.

GUIDERS TRAINING CLASS

A class has been held every month for the purpose of helping Guiders to run their several Companies and Packs more efficiently and to train themselves in all branches of Guiding. The average attendance was eleven. It is hoped that this will be raised because the whole Movement in Hong Kong would be greatly benefited by the meeting together of Guiders.

During the year Mrs. Aubrey gave the class an interesting talk on the "Wild Flowers of Hong Kong," and Miss Looker gave helpful advice on "The Management of Small Children."

play a part however humble in this great peace movement with its joyful fellowship, its wealth of interest and its unfailing philosophy:—

"It is worth a thousand pounds a year to have the habit of looking on the bright side of things."

Speaking of the "bright side" I have just had the pleasant experience of meeting again some of the Ceylon Guides on my way through Colombo. And if one needed any further evidence of the strong link of affection forged by Guiding it was amply proved by the half-hour spent at Guide Headquarters, which have been named the "Southern Room." I feel very touched by this, but very unworthy of so great an honour. The Room is delightful, so spacious and so well-equipped, and it raised a vision of those Hong Kong Headquarters which we all desire so keenly. At the moment we are contributing our mite towards the Imperial Headquarters. We do want to have our stake in the centre-point of World Guiding, but next year I hope we shall set to work to build up the funds for a pleasant little home of our own, where we can keep our belongings and talk over all our Guide joys and difficulties. It will need hard work but it can be done I feel sure. As Alice Hegan Rice says:—

"Don't take it out in washin' . . . jes' set yer mind on it and do it."

SPECIAL COLOURED SUPPLEMENT with PICTURES of all local events is given free in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL.

CHINA NEWS, LOCAL NEWS and all the NEWS.

The Weekly paper that saves you the trouble of writing Home.

The latest that has occurred in connection with the piracies on the a.s. "Hatching" and other vessels, which consistently form an engaging topic of discussion elsewhere, is recorded in the Overland China Mail.

As is widely known, the Overland is the only weekly news budget printed in Hong Kong with pictures. It is informative and reliable. If an order is placed for it to be sent to any address, it arrives regularly with each mail.

All the social and personal news of the week is included, such as obituaries, departures, functions, etc. The prize-distribution period of local schools is suitably dealt with.

From another point of view, the trial of Mr. N. I. Brewer, the barrister-at-law, of which reports appear in collected form, is also interesting.

Then there is the formation of a Society for the Protection of Children, the topical and eloquent sermon in St. Andrew's Church, the series of local shipwrecks, political and general developments in China, and many other items of importance.

Send a copy of the Overland to the folks at Home and earn their approbation. Their approval is confidently predicted.

Letters to relatives and friends in other parts of the world frequently fail to be written even by the most ardent correspondents. It is a kindly thought, therefore, to ensure that those away from the Colony, or folks at Home, should have an unfailing supply of Hong Kong and China news every week—by means of a subscription to the "Overland China Mail."

Without any trouble of packing and worrying about the Post Office on your part, and at a one-and-only cost of H.K.$2.00 for three months, the "Overland China Mail" will be sent Home for you every week, catching the mail regularly. It contains just the news, features and pictures from the daily "China Mail" that make a studied appeal to people with any interest whatsoever in Hong Kong, and many letters testify to the keen pleasure and interest its weekly arrival brings.

For your folks at Home to receive this weekly budget, or to keep yourself posted with affairs during your absence, all that you have to do is to drop a note to the "Overland China Mail."

The word "Overland" is a reminder of the experience behind the production. It has been published since the early days of the Colony, to be sent OVERLAND because there was no Suez Canal, and that was the quickest route by which to get mail Home. In the rush of times the "Overland China Mail" has become the only weekly news budget which has a pictorial supplement with local photographs. It is made just to suit requirements, as it has done all along. What more could be desired!

THE NEW GERMAN LITERATURE

CLOSER CONTACT WITH MODERN LIFE

POST-WAR INSPIRATION

Interviewed some months ago about the tendencies of German literature, a great editor replied that to his mind the most striking trait is the close contact it maintains with the epoch in which we are living, writes Jean Tarvel in "Comedia," Paris.

This public is less interested in penetrating the interior of people's souls than it is in little facts that relate to present-day life. For this reason, novels or stories describing modern life fit its exterior aspects will always interest this public, thus giving a key to the popularity enjoyed by certain memoirs, biographies, and books of travel and adventure—in short, everything that possesses a documentary character. These documents, however, are not presented impartially or objectively in strict accordance with the formula of the new realism, Germany, having suffered acute political and social torment for the last fifteen years, is passionately interested in all the problems that have accompanied this upset. Most of her writers take sides, for one could hardly expect them to be objective when they are describing what they see before their eyes. Social activity is tending more and more to dominate the lives of individuals and it is hard to judge this conflict impartially.

Facts and Conflicts

The two most striking traits of recent German literature are a predilection for all the facts that go to make up modern life and a passionate participation in its conflicts. An exception must be made, however, of certain important groups of real quality, but limited influence, like the one headed by Stefan George. But, on the whole, these tendencies are the real explanation of the striking success that German War literature has been enjoying in the past twelve months. This success is evidently the dominating characteristic of the reconstruction period, and a respectable number of books have shared in it. The triumph of Remarque's book, which far eclipsed all those which preceded or followed it, must not make us forget such estimable works as The Case of Sergeant Griseba by Arnold Zweig or War by Ludwig Renn. A. M. Frey has depicted conditions in the hospitals behind the lines, and a sailor named Ringelnatz, who has become a popular singer, has written up his wartime reminiscences with much verve and humour. A moving collection of letters written by young students killed at the front has been published, and a young man named Ernst Glaaser, in the Class of 1902, describes the impression that war-time suffering and privation made on the children behind the lines. Karl Feders, author of Captain Latour, brings to life the picturesque figure of a career officer in the German Army by drawing from diaries.

Post-War Questions

Post-war occurrences also inspire the German novelists. Bruno Frank, in his book called New Politics, has sketched portraits of Stresemann and Brandt. This work is noticeably affected by the Locarno spirit, but it is spoiled by a melodramatic climax. Arnold Bronnen, a young dramatic author who purposely goes in for extreme tendencies, uses as a background for his novel entitled O. S. (Ober Schlesien) the fighting that took place in Upper Silesia before that province was partitioned between Germany and Poland. Formerly a radical of the extreme Left Wing, Bronnen has passed over to the opposite party. From the most excessively Nationalist point of view and with an almost revolting severity of judgment on his former comrades, he discusses with real talent one of the burning German problems. In his delicate little novel, Jacqueline and the Japanese, Heinrich Eduard Jacob contrasts Berlin during the period of inflation with the old centres of German culture, Würzburg and Heidelberg, and draws a parallel between Eastern and Western civilization.

Heinrich Mann, a member of the older generation, but still unquestionably the most powerful German novelist, described post-war Germany in Mutter Marie, only to return in his latest work to the period following the Franco-Prussian War. His sociological tendencies and his interest in the mentality and customs of that epoch are revealed in the title, Eugenie, or the Bonapartes

Epoch. He has also made a collection of speeches and articles written since 1921 and entitled Seven Years, A Chronicle of Ideas and Events in which his excellent mind is shown to be equally pre-occupied with the affairs of his time.

Political Prognostications

Willy Hellpach, a doctor and politician of democratic persuasions, has written a book called Political Prognostication of Germany, full of facts and penetrating observations. Egon Friedell has concentrated three rich volumes full of ingenious interpretations to a captivating subject seldom treated, The History of the Civilization of the Modern Epoch. Count Keyserling continues in his European Spectrum to mingle jokes with profound philosophic views on modern life and modern peoples.

If love does not occupy a large place in modern German literature to-day, there is a plethora of books, nearly all of them mediocre, on love, or rather "sexual problems." Here again the positive character of modern Germany and the country's interest in social problems make themselves felt. Even in poetry the same elements are to be found, but in Germany, as elsewhere, the great public has singularly little interest in the most noble of all literary forms. To attract a public it is necessary to do what Walter Mohring did in his Poems, Lieder and Songs, where he blends a popular humorous tone with fantasy, satire, and veiled sentiment. His poems are charming examples of free verse. They are the work of a man who is closely in touch with modern life and is the exact opposite of "pure poetry."

OPENING UP C.E.R.

Train From Vladivostok Welcomed

Harbin, Jan. 14.

The trans-Continental train service is due to be resumed on January 22. Through service between Manchuria and Harbin will be restored to-day. The first train from Vladivostok reached here yesterday afternoon at one o'clock, bringing with it a number of Chinese civilians and wounded soldiers who were taken prisoners by the Soviet troops during the raid against Tungkiang. The train was heartily welcomed by a large gathering of Chinese and foreigners.

Telegraphic communications and mail between Harbin and Hailar have been restored since to-day.

Six thousand Chinese, civilians and wounded soldiers, who were taken prisoners by the Soviet troops when Tungkiang was raided late last year, are now reported to have been released and are awaiting trains to convey them to their native homes.

Gen. Ting Chao, Commissioner of Defence for the Amur River Districts, has been instructed by the Chinese authorities to take care of the released Chinese—Kuo Wen.

The Four Roads.

There are four roads through which the poisons generated in the human body escape—the breath, perspiration, kidneys and intestines. Constipation closes the greatest of these roads, throws the poisons back into the system, and trouble follows.

Pinkettes prevent constipation, restore daily regularity, dispel biliousness, liverishness, sick-head-aches, keep the skin clear and the breath sweet. They also quickly relieve piles. Chemists everywhere sell Pinkettes, 80 cents per box.

A Briton on the Americans

["The American Illusion," by C. Owen; Ernest Benn, 10/6.]

Here we have yet another Briton's impressions of the United States. This book is rather more outspoken than the works of other British writers but not nearly so damning towards the U.S.A. as are the books of several American authors. Mr. Owen seems to have had a very good three months in America where he was entertained and shown round by the "Taipans". We doubt greatly whether that qualifies one to describe a nation of one hundred and twenty millions inhabiting three million square miles of diversified territory. However, Mr. Owen seems to have heard a lot, read a lot, and kept his eyes open; and the result is that we are presented with some interesting descriptions, a host of facts and figures, some pungent remarks, and a little theorising.

Perhaps the most powerful thing about this uneven book is its description and analysis of the alarming amount of crime prevalent in the United States. Such a state of affairs is a terrible disgrace to any country, and until the annual number of its murders decrease by 95 per cent. America can hardly be taken seriously when she preaches sloppy idealism. A country with over ten thousand murders a year, where squeeze and municipal corruption are rife, where citizens are unsafe in side streets and public parks after dusk, should stop spending money in sending missionaries to China and India, should stop laying down the law to Cuba, Haiti, and small republics until she cleans up her own Augean stables. It seems to us that America's apaches are a much greater menace than her negroes.

Mr. Owen is amusing but scarcely original on the question of "prohibition," and he spoils his effects by harping too much on that string. On the question of "Who won the war" he is hysterical and school-boyish. That is now (or should be) ancient history. In any case, it was never more than a figment of imagination on the part of small minds both inside and outside America.

If Mr. Owen were to reside in America for a year away from plutocrats and not try to be clever he would probably produce a good book.

["Ur of the Chaldees," by C. Leonard Woolley; Ernest Benn Ltd. 7/6.]

Like the word Mesopotamia, Ur of the Chaldees is a year away from a blessed expression. Yet to 99 out of 100 it is a mere name signifying something vague and far away. To those, and to all interested in early history of archaeology, this small volume should prove full of interest. It gives a simple account of the romantic and historically important discoveries on the site of the city from which Abraham is supposed to have started his wanderings.

The author, Mr. C. L. Woolley, has done his work well. What most scientists would have made dull with technicalities he has made as interesting as many a novel. Through the medium of newspapers and magazines most people have heard of the excavations going on at Ur, but few know the details of the difficult and delicate nature of the work. In this book we have a racy resume of the more important results achieved up to date.

We begin with the discovery made last winter of material evidence of a great flood, probably the flood that gave rise to the Bible story, when a considerable portion of Southern Mesopotamia was inundated and thousands of the serfs inhabiting the low lying regions perished. Then come most interesting descriptions of the remains of a civilisation greatly antedating that of the Chaldees—Royal Tombs, etc., the treasures of which have revolutionised our ideas concerning the origin of Western civilisation, and seem to prove that the Sumerians were a cultured people when the Egyptians were emerging from the Neolithic Age. The finds bring us down to the relatively recent days of Belshazzar and Cyrus the Persian. Then the rest is silence. Zoroastrianism and the shifting of the river bed spelt the end of Ur, the oldest known city on earth.

Few excavations have produced in so short a time so continuous a record of civilisation; and for some periods, the only evidence we possess comes from the ruins of Ur. This book, which is well illustrated, is marvellous value for 7/6.

["The Unexpected Legacy," by E. R. Panshon; Ernest Benn, Limited, London.]

A mystery story of 288 pages opens rather haltingly but improves as the tale unfolds. The usual murder occurs, and also, as usual, the hero is suspected by the police.

The chief characters, Allan Marsh and the gloomy Police Sergeant, are not quite convincing. The sergeant is gloomy only because he is said to be; he acts and speaks in much the same manner as any policeman of intelligence. The most interesting character is Mr. Beaman, a humorist who says but little and is only referred to twice or thrice in the whole 286 pages.

As a thriller the book falls a little short, but it invites the attention of the reader to the possible existence of two evils which, if at all prevalent, constitute a grave danger to any unwary member of the community, and, for this reason at least, the book is well worth reading.

["The Courts of the Morning," by John Buchan, Hodder and Stoughton, 7/6d. net.]

After reading this enthralling romance by Mr. Buchan, one may be led to wonder why it is that he has not a greater place in modern letters. He has a charming and an easy style, and a descriptive touch that has few rivals among his contemporaries; his character studies, too, are neatly and economically sketched into a background that is always alive with colour and action. Yet one would hesitate to say that his name will go down in the annals of 19th Century fiction as one of our representative writers. In preparing a long list of descriptive writers, from R. L. Stevenson to Thomas Hardy and Sheila Kaye-Smith, one would not include the name of Mr. Buchan. And yet, apart from being the author of two of the best books of the century—"Witch Wood" and "Huntingtower," he is also recognised (even by that chary nation) as being one of the most graceful and poetic writers on Scotland.

Ethel Mannin, popular British novelist, scored the "new modern" who are constantly searching for the unconventional. After a time, she asserts, so many women do the unconventional that it becomes conventional.

The secret of his failure to attain popularity outside a loyal circle of "Buchanites" may be that the Scottish character and scenery no longer captivate Southern hearts as they did in the days of the Walter Scott phase.

Whatever the reason, it is impossible (at least to the reviewer) to read any one of his books without a twinge of indignation that this is so. One defect, if it be a defect, is his seeming inability to rise above the tune of the novel-list and sing in a cadence that touches the affairs of common life. His characters are always delightful people—even the villainous ones—but they never possess enough vitality of their own to spring out of the pages and entertain our imaginations long after the book has been laid aside.

In his latest novel "The Courts of the Morning," Mr. Buchan again gives us a story of pure adventure of the same type as his "Prester John." The book opens

JAPAN TO-DAY

An Indispensable Guide for Foreigners

Present-Day Japan, the annual English supplement of the Osaka and Tokyo Asahi, which first saw the light in 1925, is gradually gaining an important position among publications treating of things Japanese as one of the most valuable guides to foreign students of the Japanese Empire.

Present-Day Japan for 1929 bears the subtitle, "Overseas Trade Number." This title is due to the fact that in the economic section of the supplement considerable space is devoted this year to present conditions in the overseas trade of Japan. This work, in our opinion, is a very useful source of information on details of the conditions of Japan's overseas trade.

The journal contains nearly 150 pages of letterpress besides four superb-coloured plates. The tenor of the articles may be judged from some of the following headings: "Commerce: a Guarantee of Peace"; "Duke of Gloucester as the Garter Envoy"; "The Cherry Blossom"; "The Osaka Asahi and Its Jubilee Celebration"; "Political and Social"; "International"; "Art Music, and Literature"; "Sports and Recreation"; and "Intimate Japan." There is also a valuable "Economic and Financial Section" replete with information.

In the familiar, park-like scenery of the Border country, but moves swiftly to the arid wastes or mountainous jungles of the South Americas, where the author proves himself to be equally at home.

The chief figures are Sandy Arbuthnot, now Lord Glenroyden, and Mr. John S. Blenkinsop, both of whom appear in "Greenmantle." The scene is laid in a South American republic which is brought by accident into international politics. The story tells how the ambition of a great man, which might have played havoc with the peace of the world, is frustrated by a new kind of war. Many of Mr. Buchan's familiar characters appear, and interwoven with the scheme of adventure is Sandy's love story.

The description of the copper mines of the Gran Seco, the "poison country" beyond the Golden Gate, the vast seas of uncharted jungle, is impressive and never wearisome. Mr. Buchan can use rich colours without letting them run; he has a daring pen that, wielded by others, might be in danger of running away with itself. One grows to love the country and the British adventurers who succeed within its borders in one of the strangest guerrilla conquests in history.

The weak point in Mr. Buchan's tale is his explanation (or lack of explanation) of the international designs of Castor, the Governor of the Province, whom a charming, but unpretentious young Englishwoman changes from a Napoleon to a wistful sentimentalist. Castor's grand dream (which is really the crux of the whole tale) is vague and unintelligible, and renders the war waged by respectable members of English society a little ridiculous and incredible, in spite of all the paraphernalia and tactics of modern warfare. The little "dust up" is a well-written piece of military fiction and the "campaign" displayed both strategy and skill. Of course, when a novelist wages war, the geography of the country shapes itself to his ends, and he is always sure of the result. But there is good fun to be had from the reading of this book, which is by no means the least successful product of Mr. Buchan's genius.

THE GRIM SECRET OF A NOVELIST

POISONS A DYING LAD TO END HIS SUFFERING

PEASANT BOY GENIUS

A remarkable manuscript of deep human interest—the disclosure of a dramatic incident in the life of a famous novelist—came into the possession of the "Daily Express" recently.

It is from the pen of Miss Dora Christie-Murray, daughter of the late David Christie-Murray, and it was accompanied by the statement that the writer had been inspired to place the facts on record after reading the accounts of the trial of Richard Corbett for the murder of his mother, whom he killed, he said because she suffered from an incurable disease.

Miss Christie-Murray states that, many years ago, her father adopted the son of a Belgian peasant, and deliberately poisoned him when he lay in shrieking agony a few days before his inevitable end.

"When my father was a young man, travelling in the Belgian Ardennes he came across a cottage tucked away from civilization, inhabited by an old couple and their son," the manuscript says.

"The parents were of typical peasant class—heavy and loutish, their backs bowed with work, neither expecting nor hoping for anything beyond their lives of daily toil. But the sixteen-year-old son, a bright, flame-like spirit, was a changeling to their dull eyes.

A Rural Genius
"Without any book-learning he was a genius. Untutored, he had the knowledge with which all artists are born and above all he had the great, sorrowful gift of music.

"But all his beauty of soul was imprisoned in a sickly body that found work, of even the lightest kind, impossible. The parents, irritated by his helplessness and frightened by his alien ways, found him a burden, a useless clog on their own dull, stupid lives, and the boy in turn was bewildered by his parents' lack of understanding and sympathy.

"My father, naturally attracted by the boy, approached the parents with a view to adopting him, and was met with open armed enthusiasm. To cut a long story short, he finally took the boy away, resented that his artistic should be his own level.

Incurable Disease
The boy—let us call him Henri—lived for a few months in heaven, but the sickness of his early life turned to an incurable disease, and, in spite of all the loving care my father gave him, he became feebler and feebler and at last bed-ridden. All his days and nights, and finally all his minutes, were one protracted agony that not even the most powerful drugs could assuage.

Finally the time came when it was only a question of days before the end—and such days. Such agonies of pain, such helpless, shrieking agony, that my father could hardly bear to stand by the bedside.

Finally one day he turned to the doctor, almost frantic with his inability to do anything and said "For God's sake, man, do something! I cannot bear to see this going on any longer."

The doctor looked at him strangely for a moment, then picked up a small bottle which he handed him. "When I am gone, monsieur," he said, "and the pain becomes very acute, you may give Henri three drops of this medicine—just three drops, remember; more would be fatal."

"Three Drops Only"
My father said: "You mean—?" "Three drops only; more would be fatal," repeated the doctor.

"Thank you," said my father, and the doctor left the room.

As he turned to where the boy was lying, exhausted after his last paroxysm of pain, Henri opened his eyes and said faintly: "I can't bear it, sir. Help me!"

My father, gentle as a woman, went down on his knees and lifted the boy's head in his arms.

"My boy," he said "you have only a few more days to live, and they will be full of pain and agony. I have something here that might help to relieve the pain a little, and if I give it to you, you will go to sleep and never wake up again. Will you take it?"

"I'll take anything from your hands," said the boy.

So, with hands that never faltered, my father poured out the overdose and held it to the boy's lips, and the boy drank it trustfully, then settled down with a smile of unutterable peace and just whispered, "God bless you, sir."

And so fell asleep, and sleeping, died.

CREW'S NARROW ESCAPE

New York, Yesterday.
A message from Buenos Aires states that the Monte Cervantes sank last night. Captain Dreyer went down with his ship, and the skeleton crew left aboard narrowly escaped.—Reuter's American Service.

Earlier Cables
Buenos Aires, Yesterday.
Anxiety is felt with regard to the position of the sixteen hundred passengers and crew of the German liner Monte Cervantes, which struck a rock near Tierra-del-Fuego, in the Straits of Magellan on Wednesday.

The Monte Cervantes was badly holed and the bows quickly submerged.
The passengers and crew were put ashore at Ushuaia, a prison colony containing the most notorious prisoners from Argentine. Ushuaia has very few buildings and no proper accommodation for so many people.

The liner Monte Sarmiento is proceeding to Ushuaia to take off the stranded persons, but she only has accommodation for six hundred persons.

Pleasant People to Meet!
The death penalty is non-existent in Argentina and the worst malefactors are sent to Ushuaia. Its inhabitants include the high minded anarchist who, in 1909 bombed and killed the Chief of the Buenos Aires police, and another is a German gentleman convicted of killing and quartering one of his friends!

The Monte Cervantes is reported to be a total loss.—Reuter.

LADY SIMON AGAIN ON THE WAR PATH
"TERRIBLE CASES"

London, Yesterday.
Lady Simon in a speech at Wellington, made reference to her speech cabled on January 16. She emphasised that she had always distinguished between open and avowed slavery, such as existed in Arabia and Abyssinia, and abuses arising from the system of child adoption for domestic purposes.

The latter might not amount to slavery, but might involve serfdom and sometimes led to cruelty as revolting as anything in the history of slavery.

While many Ceylonese and Chinese households doubtless treated adopted children kindly, it was impossible to deny, in face of published reports, that there were terrible cases of maltreatment, and stronger measures must be taken stop these dreadful crimes!—Reuter.
